Public funds cover birth control

Health department fills role by providing contraceptives

On Monday, the U.S. Supreme Court will begin hearing challenges to the Obama administration's healthcare law, including the requirement for most employers to pay for contraceptive services.

This means the funding of contracepwomen in this region and elsewhere. But in a county where the unemployment rate tops 10 percent, many women won't get contraceptives from insurance regardless of what the Supreme Court decides.

Though Planned Parenthood agencies are widely known as abortion clinics, they also offer contraceptive services to women who can't pay out of pocket and don't have insurance. They're the obvious sources for many women in big cities.

But the nearest Planned Parenthood agency to Hopkinsville is in Nashville, Tenn., about 75 miles away.

Instead, the Christian County Health Department provides contraceptives to all women who come through its doors seeking them, regardless of their ability to pay, said Amy Maternowski, the department's nursing supervisor.

A spokeswoman from Kentucky's Cabinet for Health and Family Services said all the state's local health departments follow this practice.

In the fiscal year that ended in June, the Christian County Health Department spent $50,441 of its funds from local taxes to buy contraceptives and fund counseling related to family planning, according to data the department provided.

This expenditure supplemented funds from the federal and state governments, Medicaid, private insurance and out-ofpocket payments. Altogether, the public funds amounted to $289,063.

These numbers suggest the community depends heavily on the health department's services. The department only collected $7,000 from out-of-pocket payments and $22,000 from private insurance

Annah Mobus struggles with everyday tasks, such as opening doors and turning the lights on

However, life for the 16-year-old girl from Bowling Green could soon get a little easier. Through Canine Assistants and Milk-Bone, Annah will receive a service dog for free in part because her father Sgt. 1st Class Kenneth Woody serves in the military. Milk-Bone hosted a ceremony Thursday on post to introduce Annah, who has spinal muscular atrophy, to another service dog. Destiny O'Brien, a 13-year-old with epilepsy from LaVergne, Tenn., brought Salsa to show Annah what kind of dog she can expect to get. Destiny also got her dog through Canine Assistants.

During the ceremony, Destiny and her family talked about how Salsa has helped them by alerting her parents when Destiny has seizures and performing other Annah's dog will be selected and trained to meet her specific needs. Annah will receive her dog after it goes through a two-week training camp. Annah said she hopes to get a Labradoodle, a Labrador-poodle mix.

Typically, it's the Labs or a new breed they've been working with called a Labradoodle," said J.D. Fenessy, the national sales director of Del Monte/Milk-Bone. "They don't shed as much. Some of the children can have allergies, like Annah. So, she will get a dog that will match her physical needs, probably one like Salsa."

Fenessy works in conjunction with Canine Assistants, which provides service dogs to people with disabilities at no cost. Fenessy also works to place people from military families near the top of the

"There's nothing worse than (when) I have two or three dogs left over at the end of the year and I can't give them to a military family because they didn't register."

Army sergeant charged in Afghan massacre

WASHINGTON (AP) filed against Army Staff Sgt. Robert Bales reflect the horror of the crime: 17 counts of premeditated murder, more than half of them children, during a rampage southern Afghanistan. But while Afghans are calling for swift and severe punishment, it will likely be months, even years, before the public ever sees Bales in a courtroom.

One only has to look at two recent and similarly high-profile cases to see that the wheels of military justice turn slowly.

It's been nearly months since an Army psychiatrist, Maj. Nidal Hasan, allegedly killed 13 and injured two dozen more at Fort Hood, Texas. His trial is scheduled to begin in June. And it's been 21 months since the military charged intelligence analyst Bradley Manning with leaking hundreds of thousands of pages of classified information. It took nine months before he was deemed competent to stand

The Bales case is likely to be equally complex, involving questions of his mental state and the role that the stresses of war and possible previous head injuries may have played in his alleged actions. Most of the evewitnesses are the Afghan villagers and survivors who may be brought in for the trial.

The military on Friday charged Bales with 17 counts of murder, six counts of attempted murder and six counts of assault in the March 11 pre-dawn massacre in two southern Afghanistan villages near his base. The father of two from Lake Tapps, Wash., was officially informed of the 29 charges just before noon at the U.S. military prison at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., where he is confined.

The maximum punishment for a premeditated murder conviction is death, dishonorable discharge from the armed forces, reduction to the lowest enlisted grade and total forfeiture of pay and allowances, according to Gary Kolb, spokesman for U.S. forces Afghanistan. mandatory minimum sentence is life imprisonment with the chance of parole.

The charges offered few details of what happened that night. But the 38-yearold soldier is accused of walking off his base with his 9mm pistol and M-4 rifle, which was outfitted with a grenade launcher, killing four men, four women, two boys and seven girls and burning some of the bodies. The ages of the children were not disclosed.

In the most detailed descriptions of the shootings to date, the charges say Bales shot a young girl in the head, a young boy in the thigh, a man in the neck and a woman in the chest and groin. The documents also say that he "shot at" another girl and boy, but apparently did not hit them.

The attack occurred in the Panjwai district of Kandahar Province, the spiritual birthplace of the Taliban. The dead bodies were found in Balandi and Alkozai villages — one north and one south of the Members of the Afghan delegation investigating the killings said one Afghan guard working from midnight to 2 a.m. saw a U.S. soldier return to the base around 1:30 a.m. Another Afghan soldier who replaced the first and worked until 4 a.m. said he saw a U.S. soldier leaving the base at 2:30 a.m. It's unknown whether Afghan guards saw the same U.S. soldier. If the gunman acted alone, information from the Afghan guards would suggest that he returned to base in between the shooting ram-

Scientists find truth about alcohol-induced blackouts

ARMY SUBSTANCE ABUSE PROGRAM

If your friends tell you about all of the crazy things you did at the previous night's party, yet you don't remember any of it, you suffer from alcohol-induced blackouts

It is a common misconception that blackouts only happen to alcoholics. drinkers are at risk as well, and that blackouts are likely caused by a rapid increase in blood-alcohol con-

Neuroscientists at Washington University School of Medicine in St. Louis have identified brain cells and function that allow extremely intoxicated people to perform complex tasks such as dancing, debating or even driving home without having any recollection of it the next day.

In the study, researchers reported they previously believed consuming large amounts of alcohol killed brain cells, causing the temporary amnesia commonly called blackouts. They now understand alcohol interferes with brain receptors that produce steroids, which cause neurons to misfire.

"It's been known for a long time that changes in the way neurons connect with each other underlies the ability to learn new things, and people thought alcohol blocks memory said senior investigator Dr. Chuck Zorumski, head of the Department of Psychiatry at Washington University. "It's actually the main neurons or brain cells that shut themselves down when they're exposed to alcohol." Once a person has even one blackout, it's likely others will follow, Zorumski explains, and that could lead to disaster.

"If you drink enough alcohol, you will do things you won't even realize you did the next day," he says. "You will have conversations with people you won't remember and put yourself in dangerous situations. You will get vourself in trouble, not remember and it may be the police explain-

Neuroscientists unraveled the alcohol-induced blackout mystery while studying rat brain cells to understand why certain illnesses such as Alzheimer's disease affect people's memory. When the rat brain cells were exposed to large amounts of alcohol, memory loss was signifi-

A combination of alcohol and sedating drugs, such as Xanax, is more likely to cause blackouts than alcohol alone, the study reported.

Even with drop in unemployment, many struggle to find work in Todd

FROM THE KENTUCKY PRESS NEWS SERVICE

Angela Cowan would like to see a job in a medical office on the hori-

"It's been so long since I've been to school (so) I'm having to start all over," she said. "I'm hoping going back to school is going to help me get a better job than I did have.

Cowan is among 518 local residents who are without jobs right now, although recent unemplovment figures show a move in the right direction. Kentucky labor force estimates for January showed Todd County with a drop of about 1.4 percent in unemployment rates compared to the same time the previous year, and other counties showed similar improvement.

ment rate for the Pennyrile region that includes Todd County was 9.6 percent this past January, compared to 10.8 percent a year ago.

The state's unemployment rate was 9.5 percent this past January and 10.7 percent a year ago, according to information from the state Office of Employment and Training's research and statistics branch. The Office of Employment and Training is a part of the Kentucky Education and Workforce Development Cabinet, which noted in a press release that 114 counties in the commonwealth saw a decrease in jobless rates from January of 2011 to January 2012.

Economist Manoj Shanker says economies are improving because "the huge overhang of the mortgage crisis is being resolved, he noted that, even though Kentucky wasn't at the center of that crisis, the drop in asset values af fected everybody.

"The fall in asset values made businesses less likely to invest, and banks were reluctant to lend, Shanker, who works for the reemployment

He said there was a drop in employment for service jobs during the same time.

BIRTH CONTROL: Health department provides contraceptives for those who can't pay

Kentucky's challenges

Planned Parenthood Kentucky only has offices in Louisville and Lexington. Spokeswoman Taylor Ewing Johnstone attributes this to the state's average income levels: Wealthier states tend to support nonprofits better.

Lack of funding prevents Planned Parenthood Kentucky from serving

"It's really just as simple as that," Johnstone said. "We're just very small. It's not just from thinking it's not important, because it definitely

As a result, all county health departments in Kentucky provide contraceptives to anyone who needs them, regardless of income, said Beth Fisher, spokeswoman for the Cabinet for Health and Family Services. Health departments determine what to charge each person based on Sometimes local clients can't pay at all, but no one gets turned away, Maternowski said.

Methods of coping

In the 2010-11 fiscal year, the Christian County Health Department provided 18,163 contraceptive services.

Clients only paid with private insurance 5.23 percent of the time. In 19.43 percent of transactions, they used Medicaid.

The vast majority, 82.95 percent, paid on the sliding scale with their own money. This category totaled 15,066 transactions.

From out-of-pocket payments and "other" revenue, the department took in only $7,000.

A small share of the clientele have regular visits with private doctors, but they feel more comfortable obtaining contraceptives from the health department, Maternowski

Some clients only come in for a physical and want to discuss birth control or timing a pregnancy. Though the department offers services to both men and women, men seldom come in seeking help.

Nurses begin by recording clients' height, weight and blood pressure and performing risk assessments, including the risks a woman would face if she became pregnant.

The health department provides 16 varieties of contraceptive services, ranging from birth control pills and condoms to implantable contraceptives and patches.

Because federal funding has fallen off in recent years, health department nurses go to lengths to keep their costs down. They order all these products directly from manufacturers, as they get lower prices via the state. Because prices fluctuate from month to month, they look at every manufacturer's price on every product and buy the cheapest "Trying to save our taxpayers a lit-tle bit of money," Maternowski said.

The nurses also provide counseling about infertility, abstinence and safe sex

In the last fiscal year, health department personnel had 2,990 client meetings regarding contraceptives.

firing any weapons the night his wife, Kathleen McGee, was shot. In addition, the story Kofrom the gunshot and an autopsy report on McGee was not inconsistent with suicide, Nichols said. Initially, investigators thought the wound to McGee's head was done with someone's left hand. After further research, detectives decided it was more consistent that the wound and splatter marks were actually from a gun held in the right hand, Nichols said. Even so, those reports did not show any reason why the shooting would not have been a suicide. It was the ballistics rethat encouraged detectives to bring Korolevich in for another interview, Nichols said.

After Nichols' testimony, Judge Arnold B. Lynch ruled that there was sufficient evidence to bring the case before a grand jury. Handcuffed and dressed Beshear had called for sharp cuts to most government agencies and programs when he initially presented his budget plan to lawmakers in January. Cutting $30,000-a-year housing allowance wasn't included in his proposal or that of the House. Stumbo said Friday he's OK with that cut.

Kentucky began paying a housing allowance to lieutenant governors more than a decade ago in a cost-saving move. Previously, they lived in a state-provided mansion.

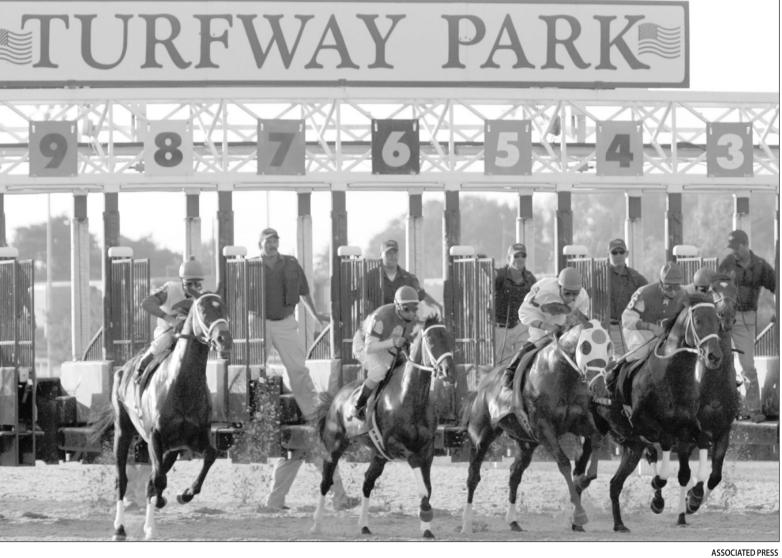

The Senate plan also stripped a proposal to create the Kentucky Appalachian College Completion Program, which would provide grants of up to $6,000 a year to students attending a handful of private colleges in the mountain about $6.5 million over the next two years. The House will press to get those grants back in the budget.

The proposal is a spinoff from an earlier recommendation to turn the private University of Pikeville into a public university. The aim was to boost the number of people in the mountain region with college degrees and spur the economy in central Appalachia. Widespread opposition led to that idea being withdrawn.

Those grants would have been paid for with revenue from an existing tax on mined coal.

Ky. horse racing fades, boosters yearn for casinos

BY BRUCE SCHREINER

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FLORENCE, Ky. — Away from the picturesque farms dotting bluegrass country, the mega-dollar yearling sales at Keeneland and the twin spires at Churchill Downs, the tradition-laden sport of horse racing is in danger of falling off the pace in its old Kentucky home.

Venerable tracks now offer $1

beer-and-hot dog promotions, live music and night racing to boost attendance.

While tracks in other states have parlayed casino gambling into higher purses, Kentucky lawmakers have resisted allowing such a move. Everyone from breeders to railbirds worries that it will eventually render the home of American horse racing an also-ran.

Even storied Churchill Downs, home of the Kentucky Derby, has felt the pressure.

The Louisville track offers a few nights of live racing, drawing three times the typical race day crowds. It has reduced racing days in its spring meet in a gambit to keep purses competitive with tracks where casino operations boost racing prizes. Between 2000 and 2008, the famed track had at least 52 racing days in the spring session; this year it will have 39. But Churchill still struggles to fill some race cards with big fields that attract more betting, track president Kevin Flanery said recently.

'We're having difficulty giving away the money that we're offering because they're going to other states that are either offering more or have less competition than a Kentucky racetrack would have," he said.

An officer told the driver that if he fled, they would release a K-9 to catch him, police said. The driver got out the car and began running. Police released the K-9 which caught the man at East 10th Street. Officers shocked the man with a Taser when he struggled, but were eventually able to handcuff him. Police found three wrapped bags of cocaine and $4,485 on the man, according to the report.

Rahim A. Shabazz, 37, was charged with second-degree fleeing police, resisting arrest, firstdegree second-offense, trafficking in a controlled substance, fugitive from another state and parole violation.

A passenger in the vehicle, Reynaldo C. Paniagua, 32, of Dallas, had $7,000 in his possession and told police that Shabazz dealt and trafficked in narcotics. Paniagua was charged with first-degree conspiracy to trafficking cocaine.

Both men remained at Christian County Jail on Friday evening.

Woman reports night robbery

A Hopkinsville woman told police that she was robbed Wednesday at 10 p.m. at a Kauai King Drive address.

She said the suspect knocked her unconscious and took her property. The charge listed is first-degree robbery.

A suspect is listed in the eport.

Scrap metal bill thwarts thieves after quick cash

Most of the state lawmakers who recently passed a bill to curb scrap metal theft in Kentucky probably have never heard of Christian County farmer Joseph Rives. If they had, they might have named House Bill 390 in honor of Rives, who decided last summer that enough was enough when valuables containing metal began disappearing from his Bradshaw Road property. One day in August, Rives sat silently inside a livestock trailer for six hours and OUR OPINION_ waited for the thieves he was certain would return for more scrap metal. When two men he didn't know drove onto the farm and appeared set to steal something, Rives was ready with a gun. He held them until sheriff's deputies arrived.

That was a good day for the good guys. Now we can say the same thing for the passage of HB 390, which advanced unanimously in both the House and Senate. Rep. Brent Yonts, D-Greenville, whose 15th District includes northeastern Christian County, was one of the sponsors.

HB 390 will discourage scrap metal theft because it requires that payment for valuable metals, such as copper, be made by mailed bank checks. The quick transaction of a cash payment will be illegal. The legislation applies to recyclers and scrap metal dealers purchasing several restricted metals, including man hole covers, guard rails, copper and other metal from air conditioners, cemetery vases, catalytic converters and copper from cable, electric and telecommunications providers.

It's unfortunate that reputable recyclers and scrap metal buyers have to deal with these restrictions and more government red tape, but the number of metal thefts requires these measures. The Kentucky Recyclers Association supported the bill, the Legislative Research Commission reported.

HB 390 will protect people like Rives who have been frustrated by the theft of air conditioners, copper tubing and other valuables. It will also benefit contractors and local governments who have been the victim of thefts. It will not apply to the recycling of aluminum drink cans. People can still get immediate cash payment for those.

COLUMNIST

Path of human improvement

veryone needs to read a passionate blather to clear his head, and it ought to come from an ordinary fellow, instead of a presidential candidate, now and then. Somebody has got to do it, and it might as well be me.

I have this persistent feeling that we are dithering about matters of fairly small consequence and that we do not have the character or the good sense we need to elect a president. Part of that feeling should quit writing newspaper articles that probably contribute to the dithering. Life on our planet has changed so radically in my lifetime. Surely for the good in many ways, but our sound-bite culture seems to be undermining our ability to think deeply and sanely about any issue. With hand over heart, we make the firmest of declarations one day and then apologize the next day.

We seem determined to have every pleasure and perk under the sun and we want them right now. I have been infected with this hedonism and I feel that it has destroyed much of my character.

In a society filled with technical experts, I find so few people who know any history or have a wide general education. Even the best among the hot-shot techs seem unable to make a simple declarative sentence. We seem to be abandoning words as tools for thinking.

My dour and morbid thoughts today are not my natural inclination.

I usually love music and laughter and the joyous interaction of friendship. My morbidity is probably the result of finding so little of these in my life today.

The suicides of young people and the unhappiness or anger that leads them to go on shooting sprees makes me particularly uneasy about our society.

I seem to see the problems much clearer than I see the solutions.

In a society that has made so much progress in curing human ills and overcoming superstition and ignorance, I wonder why we are not happier.

If you suggest that we need to find God, you have a good point, but some caveats need to be in place. A great many of the unhappy people among us kill and rampage in the name of God. Christians seem to be doing a little better lately. A minister or priest who advocates killing the 'heathen" of other religions would not last long in America.

Actually, I believe that we might be in an information explosion, which leads us to the wrong conclusion about human nature. Let's look at some facts that are hardly in dispute.

We no longer routinely burn people at the stake, we have tried to oust slavery in all its forms, we do not hang senile old women as witches, we no longer consider the insane as objects of amusement, we no longer put people to death for minor misdemeanors, our cruelty to animals is much abated, we have tried to eliminate genocide, and the list goes on and on. Actually, what we now consider as heinous crimes would have once passed as ordinary events unworthy of the news. Please consider the following excerpt from the Internet.

Cat burning was a form of zoo sadistic entertainment in 17th century Paris, France. In this form of entertainment, people would gather dozens of cats in a net and hoist them high into the air from a special bundle onto a bonfire. According to Norman Davies, the assembled people "shrieked with laughter as the animals, howling with pain, were singed, roasted, and finally carbonized. It was the custom to burn a basket, barrel, or sack full of live cats, which was hung from a tall mast in the midst of the bonfire; sometimes a fox was burned. The people collected the embers and ashes of the fire and took them home, believing that they brought good luck. The French kings often witnessed these spectacles and even lit the bonfire with their own hands. In 1648 Louis XIV, crowned with a wreath of roses and carrying a bunch of roses in his hand, kindled the fire, danced at it and partook of the banquet afterwards in the town hall. But this was the last occasion when a monarch presided at the midsummer bonfire in Paris. At Metz midsummer fires were lighted with great pomp on the esplanade, and a dozen cats, enclosed in wicker cages, were burned alive in them, to the amusement of the people.

Does this sound like people were much better 300 years ago?

Does all the good news of our better behavior mean that we should be smug? I doubt it because we still have a long way to go in our search for a better world.

Through the ages, a fear that we were going backwards was probably a major force that kept us going forward most of the time.

Time to reject 'Obamacare' objections of the American people, President Obama and a liberal Demo cratic Congress passed the disastrous health spending law commonly referred to as "Obamacare." At the time, most Kentuckians opposed more government intrusion in their health care. Time has proven them to be right. Two years later, it's clear that the health spending law will increase health wo years ago this March 23, over the care costs, reduce the number of new jobs created, and raid Medicare. It will impose a heavy burden on Kentucky's Medicaid system and force cuts to Kentucky hospitals. It needs to be repealed and replaced with common-sense reforms that will actually lower costs. The nonpartisan Congressional Budget

Office has estimated that the health spending law will increase premiums for the average family plan by $2,100, despite the president's promise that it would lower costs. The CBO also estimated that federal spending and subsidies for health care will increase by $390 billion.

Even worse is the impact the law will have on our fragile economy. With high unemployment nationally and Kentucky's unemployment even higher, government should do everything it can to spur job creation. Unfortunately, Obamacare does just the opposite, by imposing $52 billion in tax penalties on employers who don't provide government-approved health insurance. Those penalties will be passed on to employees in the form of lower wages or lost health insurance.

The law also drapes businesses in uncertainty and red tape. A recent Gallup survey found that 48 percent of small businesses are not hiring now for fear of the potential cost of this law, and just as many are not hiring over concerns of government regulations on health care. It's no wonder

MCCONNELL - the administration has released 12,000

promise of thousands more to come. I've met many Kentucky job creators who have told me they just won't hire additional workers without knowing what their new health costs will be. 'Our profit margin is very, very slim," says Louisville business owner Matt pages of regulations so far, with the Campbell. "Any additional expense, such as the employer mandate for businesses over 50 employees, would put us out of business and cause 80 people to lose their jobs.

The president also promised before his bill passed, "We're not going to mess with Medicare." But that's another broken promise. His law cuts a half-trillion dollars from Medicare, which already runs in the red for tens of trillions of dollars. These cuts do not strengthen it, but instead pay for a new government spending program. Only in Washington would someone claim that raiding a program's funding will strengthen it.

Specifically, the law will cut $135 billion from hospitals, nearly $15 billion from nursing homes, and $40 billion from home health agencies, as well as $120 billion from Medicare Advantage. Cuts to Medicare Advantage will mean 11 million enrolled seniors will get fewer medical services like dental and vision care.

The law will severely burden Kentucky's Medicaid system by putting a whopping 29 percent of Kentucky's population on Medicaid, according to the Kentucky Hospital Association. The state will have to pay for this through some combination of tax hikes and cuts to schools, roads, and funds used to pay the doctors, hospitals and nursing homes that care for our loved ones.

Gov. Steve Beshear himself said of the required expansions in Medicaid, "I have no idea how we're going to pay for it."

More and more Americans are realizing what most Kentuckians knew two years ago: Obamacare will make things worse. We need to repeal and replace it with common-sense, step-by-step reforms that will actually lower costs and have the support of the American people.

MITCH MCCONNELL, R-Ky., is the U.S. Senate minority leader.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Saturday, March 24, the 84th day of 2012. There are 282 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On March 24, 1765, Britain enacted the Quartering Act, requiring American colonists to provide temporary housing to British soldiers. On this date:

In 1832, a mob in Hiram, Ohio, attacked, tarred and feathered Mormon leaders Joseph Smith Jr.

and Sidney Rigdon. In 1882, German scientist Robert Koch announced in Berlin that he had discovered the bacillus responsible for tuberculosis. In 1932, in a first, radio station WJZ (later WABC)

broadcast a variety program from a moving train in Marvland. In 1934, President Franklin D. Roosevelt signed a bill granting future independence to the Philippines.

In 1944, in occupied Rome, the Nazis executed more than 300 civilians in reprisal for an attack by Italian partisans the day before that had killed 32 German soldiers.

In 1958, rock-and-roll singer Elvis Presley was inducted into the Army in Memphis, Tenn. In 1976, the president of Argentina, Isabel Peron, was deposed by her country's military. In 1980, one of El Salvador's most respected Roman Catholic Church leaders, Archbishop Oscar Arnulfo Romero, was shot to death by a sniper as he celebrated Mass in San Salvador. In 1989, the supertanker Exxon Valdez ran aground on a reef in Alaska's Prince William Sound and began leaking 11 million gallons of crude oil.

In 1995, after 20 years, British soldiers stopped routine patrols in Belfast, Northern Ireland.

In 1999, NATO launched airstrikes against Yugoslavia, marking the first time in its 50-year existence that it had ever attacked a sovereign country. Thirty-nine people were killed when fire erupted in the Mont Blanc tunnel in France and burned for two days.

Ten years ago: President George W. Bush, during a six-hour visit to El Salvador, held out the promise of expanded trade to Central American nations. At the Academy Awards, Halle Berry became the first black actress to win an Oscar for a leading role for her work in "Monster's Ball," while Denzel Washington became the second black actor, after Sidney Poitier, to win in the best actor category for "Training Day." "A Beautiful Mind" won four Oscars, including best picture and best director for Ron Howard.

Five years ago: The U.N. Security Council unanimously voted to impose new sanctions against Iran for its refusal to stop enriching uranium. Japan's Miki Ando won the women's title at the World Figure Skating Championship in Tokyo, leading a 1-2 finish for the host country with Mao Asada second.

One year ago: The Census Bureau released its first set of national-level findings from the 2010 count on race and migration, showing that Hispanics accounted for more than half of the U.S. population increase over the previous decade, exceeding estimates in most states as they crossed a new census milestone: 50 million, or 1 in 6 Americans. A private funeral was held at Forest Lawn Cemetery for Elizabeth Taylor (the service began 15 minutes behind schedule in accordance with the actress' wish to be late for her own funeral.)

'Sad condition' of local schools | Character

t is with a heavy heart for the educational future of this county that I write this letter. I have never written a letter to the editor in my life, but I cannot sit back and say nothing any longer. The stakes for the educational future of the students and teachers in the Christian County Public Schools (CCPS) are too high.

I retired from the CCPS after 32 years as an English teacher, guidance counselor, supervisor of instruction and principal of Christian County High School. Upon leaving CCPS, I accepted a position as coordinator of guidance and counseling at Hopkinsville Community College, where I remained for 10 years. I went back to work for the CCPS for 30-45 days a and reading comprehension in my grandchildren's elementary school. My last working day in the CCPS was in 2010. I love this system, and I was privileged to work with some of the finest educators in the state. I was one of the 253 people who signed the letter read by Anita Boyd at the board meeting last week. I was in attendance at the meeting, and I heard the letter read by Angie Major. Until I read your editorial in Monday's paper, I did not realize that there were two "divergent" opinions given at the board meeting.

There was nothing in Ms. Major's letter with which I disagree. I too feel that the process of hiring the next superintendent for CCPS should be a "transparent hiring process." I cannot presume to know what the people who wrote the letter have in mind for the hiring process. I can only speak for what that phrase means to me.

A transparent hiring process is one that outlines the process, gives me the opportunity for input in the qualities wanted in a superintendent, keeps me informed about how the search is progressing, the opportunity to meet the finalists in an open forum and ask questions and hear responses. Then, based on all information available, the board makes a final decision. If a suitable candidate does not emerge, then the board should re-open the search. It does not mean me or any other community person or group bringing undue pressure on the board to select a "certain" person based on our own personal biases.

The final decision in the selection of a superintendent is the board's responsibility. The board members have been elected to select, in their opinion, the best person to lead this system forward in educating ALL students. They cannot give away that responsibility.

The editorial goes on to assume that the letter read by Mrs. Boyd represents a group of people who believe that "a lack of student discipline is affecting the quality of education in our classrooms." The letter actually says that "we support a system that has effective discipline and fosters mutual respect, responsibility and accountability." It is very presumptive on the part of the editor of the New Era or Carter Hendricks (the CEO of the Chamber of Commerce) as he posted on Facebook to assume that by effective discipline we meant "putting kids out of school" or "a lack of student discipline is affecting the quality of education in our classrooms." Neither of those statements reflects my definition of effective discipline. Effective discipline to me is outlining as clearly and concisely as possible behavioral expectations for students and the consequences if those expectations are not met. These expectations and consequences must be outlined at the classroom, school, and district levels. They should be for ALL students. If we believe that all students can learn (and most at high levels), why would we not believe that ALL students can satisfactorily follow basic behavioral standards regardless of their home and parental backgrounds? They can and they will!

Effective discipline does not have boundaries that move and double standards dependent on who you are. Effective discipline is teaching at an early age acceptable behavior. Effective discipline is providing classrooms where the rights of ALL students to learn are not infringed upon by the disruptive actions of one.

Carter Hendricks was a student at CCHS during the time I was principal. It was my responsibility, to the best of my ability, to provide the teachers and classrooms for him to learn at a high level and to be prepared to successfully enter college without having to take remedial classes for skills he did not learn in high school. I know he received that opportunity, and I know he successfully entered and finished college. He along with his 1,300-plus fellow classmates ALL deserved that opportunity. Carter's children and my grandchildren deserve the same opportunity

The rights of disruptive students in classrooms end when they so infringe on the rights of fellow students that they do not have a classroom conducive to teaching and learning. Yes, we had students who were disruptive, and we used every means possible to try to keep them in the classroom. But when their disruptive behavior was so frequent and so bad that others were not safe or teachers could not teach, then they were ultimately recommended to alternative school.

Carter said he taught in an alternative school, and, of course, the goal is for those students at the alternative school to learn appropriate behavior and return to the regular classroom. The goal of the schools where I worked has always been to have ALL students learn and graduate from high school. I assume that Mr. Link as chief administrator of CCPS has provided the backing necessary for teachers and principals to provide classrooms for students that are safe and free of disruptive students who keep others from learning. If he has not provided that leadership for effective student behavior, then he has failed to provide the best education for ALL students to achieve at high levels.

The editorial also seemed to know what was meant by "mutual respect." The editorial assumed that it was "a clear reference to complaints that Link and his assistant, Rim Watson, were overly aggressive in their push to improve the quality of teaching in the district."

Let me tell you what mutual respect means to me. It means treating people the way you would want to be treated under similar circumstances. It means professional level conversations on best educational practices to achieve the goals of the district. It means providing the resources and training necessary to implement those practices. It means a fair and equitable assessment of results. It means open and fair evaluations of professional staff. It means giving ample and adequate time for changes to take place. It means taking the steps necessary to implement change, but doing it on a professional level.

It does NOT mean yelling, screaming spitting and spewing that "I want your score up!!" It does NOT mean saying to principals "If you don't produce high scores, I will just fire your_ NOT mean getting on table tops and demeaning an entire school faculty and saying "I'll just fire all of you." It does NOT mean telling principals that you score portfolios "in house" so you can be in charge of your own destiny. It does NOT mean dictating to teachers to the point that they are petrified on a "walk through" lest they be teaching something that the "team" did not construe as teaching to a standard. If Mr. Link and Mr. Watson are guilty of these actions, then they have not provided the leadership that the teachers and students of CCPS deserve.

I, and I believe the others who signed the letter presented by Mrs. Boyd, feel that it is extremely important to hire a superintendent that can lead CCPS with integrity and high levels of expectations for ALL students. There is no room for divisiveness or second-guessing, or making comments such as "that's old school thinking." In the past we have lost outstanding superintendent candidates who have applied to this district, come here for interview and public forums, and then dropped out when they heard all the bickering and divisive entities in this

This school system, or any school system is not easy to lead. We need a superintendent who intends to provide education to ALL students and at high levels. If we get the right person, he/she will know how to run the schools, and he/she won't need a whole lot of advice from us. The CCPS do need our positive support, adequate resources, and the opportunity to do their jobs without a whole lot of interference.

The current CCPS system has the most highly trained and dedicated workforce ever. Let them do their jobs. The school year has approximately 185 instructional days. We now have weeks taken from instructional time for practice testing, testing and post testing. Evaluation and testing are necessary, but they should not be consuming such an inordinate amount of time from instruction. Testing has become the tail wagging the dog.

We have students in the CCPS who are extremely intelligent and capable. Have you talked to a 6-year-old lately? Many are very sharp, and ALL deserve to be in schools where expectations are high. Students in Christian County come to schools that are well equipped; where food is available and provided if needed; where clothing, glasses, and other material are made available if needed; and where highly trained, caring teachers await them. What is the missing link here? It is student accountability. Learning is hard work, but it is the "job" of the student. No amount of blaming others can take away the responsibility of the students to WORK on acquiring the skills being taught in their classrooms. Students must assume their share of responsibility for their own success.

Anita Boyd, the lady who read one of the letters at the board meeting, has recently had two outstanding children graduate from the CCPS. She herself is a graduate of CCPS. She knows of what she speaks first hand. Thank you, Anita, for the courage to speak out on behalf of the students and teachers of CCPS. Thank you to the board of education for standing-up to the task at hand. You have a tremendous job to do. You have had much "advice" given to you in public forum. The signers of Mrs. Boyd's letter simply wanted to say "thank you," and to say we recognize the awesome responsibility that you have to serve ALL students.

I have spent almost my entire life in the schools of Christian County. It has been the most rewarding career I could have chosen. I see countless numbers of students throughout this community, this state and throughout the world who are productive citizens and leaders who are products of the CCPS.

Yes, I am proud to have been a part of the rich heritage of this fine school system. It truly saddens me to feel that the CCPS system has never been in such a sad condition. We have lost countless outstanding teachers who retire as soon as they are eligible (27 years), to other school systems, to debilitating health conditions, to simply not entering the teaching profession because of what they see and hear. The morale of teachers is low. In my opinion the small rise in test scores has not justified the means. We can do better. We must do better for the sake of students, teachers, administrators and the citizens of Christian County.

anford N. McDonnell died on March 19 at age 89. Not surprisingly, newspaper obituaries are highlighting his many successful years at the helm of the McDonnell Douglas Corp. But I predict that when the history of our era is written, he will be best remembered as America's leading advocate for char acter education in our schools. Of course, I'm biased because I got to see this humble, compassionate and visionary man up close for more than 20 years as a fellow board member of the Character Education Partnership – the organization he founded and guided after he retired from the business world (www.character.org).

Sandy led the way, making a compelling case for taking character seriously with business colleagues, political leaders, educators, parents, students - and anyone else who would listen.

It worked. Today, thanks to the efforts of CEP and like-minded organizations, thousands of educators are transforming the culture of their schools by teaching and modeling core ethical values such as honesty, integrity, caring, responsibility and respect.

Although much more needs to be done to reach all schools, the character-education movement has made great inroads - and is here to stay.

What does educating for character have to do with First Amendment freedoms? In a word, everything.

"Only a virtuous people are capable of freedom," wrote Benjamin Franklin. "As nations become more corrupt and vicious, they have more need of masters.

What Sandy accurately described as a "crisis of character" plagues our country.

From corporate scandals to overcrowded prisons, from bullying and cheating in schools to widespread drug abuse, characterrelated failures threaten the health of American democracy – and the vitality of our

Sandy understood that schools can't do it all - which is why CEP promotes strong part nerships with parents and communities in developing a character-education mission. But in the civic arena, schools have an obligation to prepare young people to be engaged, ethical citizens committed to "liberty and justice for all."

Understood properly, comprehensive, effective character education is all about giving students (and all members of the school com munity) meaningful opportunities to practice freedom responsibly in a school culture that encourages, among other things, respect for the rights of others, shared decision-making, civic engagement, peer mediation, and ethical use of the Internet.

In short, a school committed to educating for character is a school that actually practices what it teaches in civics classes about the rights and responsibilities of citizenship

Every year at the CEP annual meeting, Sandy helped honor "schools of character" from every region of the country. One typica winner, a middle school serving a disadvantaged population in Sandy's own state of Mis souri, has many of the "best practices" that define effective character education:

Students hold class meetings and participate in making class rules. Trained peer mediators help fellow students resolve conflicts. Teachers include discussion of ethical issues in classes across the curriculum. In these and other ways, students, teachers, staff and parents work together to create and sustain a caring, ethical community

Before implementing character education, this middle school was considered a "failing school." Today grades are up. suspensions and discipline problems are down, and parents are ... lining up to get in.

"Is there no virtue among us?" asked James Madison, the primary author of the Bill of Rights. "If there be not, we are in a wretched situation To suppose that any form of government will secure liberty or happiness without any virtue in the people, is a chimerical idea.

For your inspiration and leadership — and for reminding us of the inseparable link between character and freedom – thank you,

Kentucky joins Elite Eight, edges Indiana

Davis had a ràther quiet night. No worries. He's got plenty of help at Kentucky.

The top-seeded Wildcats took care of the team that beat them back in early December and are off to another regional final, putting all their weapons on display in a 102-90 victory over gritty Indiana on Friday night. Michael Kidd-Gilchrist scored 24 points and four other players were in double figures for Kentucky (35-2), which made up for a 73-72 loss back in early December.

Davis, the Wildcats' freshman star, wasn't a huge factor after picking up two early fouls, finishing with nine points and 12 rebounds. Kidd-Gilchrist took the starring role with a double-double, also grabbing 10 rebounds. Doron Lamb had 21 points, Darius Miller 19, Marquis Teague 14 and Terrence Jones 12.

Christian Watford had 27 points to lead the Hoosiers (27-9), whose comeback season ended Baylor vs. Kentucky two wins shy of the Final Four. Indiana, which won a total of 28 games the previous three seasons, has regained its usual place among the college basketball bluebloods under coach Tom Crean..

But Big Blue is moving on to its third straight regional final. Kentucky will face Baylor on Sunday for a trip to the Final Four. Indiana's freshman star, Cody Zeller, had 20 points, while Victor Oladipo chipped in with 15 before fouling out. Kidd-Gilchrist just kept pounding the ball inside, drawing foul after foul on the Hoosiers, then knocking down the free throws

Jones, who had only four points in the December meeting, signaled this would be a different night by scoring Kentucky's first five points in the rematch. That set the tone for a shootout, both teams running and gunning in an exhilarating display that kept fans in both blue and red on their feet most of the time at the Georgia Dome.

There wasn't much to fear on the inside in the opening half, not with the two big men, Davis and Zeller, both spending much of the period on the bench, each saddled with two fouls.

Davis sat for the final 14:05 of the half, the Wildcats not wanting to take any chance on their best player picking up another foul.

Lady Cols' Baker to play volleyball at Asbury in '12

BY KEITH JENKINS NEW FRA ASSISTANT SPORTS EDITOR

Courtney Baker wanted to be a cheerleader. Christian County High School volleyball coach Rick Erickson thought she would be better served by the net. He was right, and Baker is thankful.

"I'm so happy I'm out of that, because it was awful," Baker said of cheerleading. "I think it was just something for me to do. I'm so happy I've

As an eighth-grader, Baker shifted her sights from stunts, aerials and handsprings to kills, aces and blocks. It was all due to an encounter she had with Erickson, who took over the Christian County volleyball program in 2008.

Joiner adjusts to college game quickly

BOWLING GREEN, Ky. — The numbers Griffin Joiner was able to put up last season for the Christian County Lady Colonels' softball team are still jaw dropping and likely never to be touched.

As a senior in 2011, Joiner hit .654 with 18 doubles, 18 home runs and 66 RBIs. In the pitching circle, she was 20-2 with a 1.73 ERA and 110 strikeouts.

At the end of her senior season with Christian County, she was named Kentucky Miss Softball, the Gatorade Kentucky Softball Player of the Year and the Kentucky High Rick Pitino (left) will lead the No. 4 Louisville Cardinals against seventh-seeded Florida and his former assistant, Billy Donovan (right), today for a trip to the Final Four on the line.

Pitino, Donovan to meet with Final Four on line

SUCCESS

together, but we really,

truly love

each other.

Billy is like a son to me."

Louisville head coach

AP NATIONAL WRITER

PHOENIX — Billy Donovan knew a oad idea when he heard one.

Put on this cowboy hat and these spurs and we'll take a picture of you, his coach told him. Maybe we'll even put it on the front of the team program. "I was not happy about doing that,"

Donovan said.

Rick Pitino rarely steered him wrong, though. A quarter-century since that fateful photo, "Billy The Kid" has become a championship coach with a legacy, and the guy who made him dress up that day isn't doing so bad himself. Today, they meet on opposite sides of the court — Pitino trying to make his sixth trip to the Final Four and second at Louisville and Donovan going for a fourth Final Four with the Florida Gators.

Pitino is 6-0 in the head-tohead matchups, almost all those results explained because he had the better talent when the two met. None, however, have come with the stakes this high or the emotions so mixed.

"Not only did we have success together, but we really, truly love each other," Pitino said. "Billy is like a son to me.'

So much of the relationship between coach and pupil has been documented over the years — every time there's an anniversary and, especially, as Donovan's stature rose with his two national titles. After the first one, Donovan celebrated by waving Pitino down onto the court.

"I started crying," Pitino said. "I felt better about him winning it than when I won it." Nearly two decades before that. Donovan was the overweight guard, a marginal Big East player, and Pitino was fresh on the scene at Providence — a school that had been last or next-to-last in the conference in every season since its inception in 1979.

Having trouble getting off the bench before Pitino arrived, Donovan told his new coach he was considering transferring. Pitino looked into it and couldn't get a sniff but didn't want to break that news to Donovan. But instead of giving up on the player, Pitino urged him to get in shape. As luck had it, the 3-point line was being introduced to college basketball, and while many coaches were fighting the new trend, Pitino was embracing it. A few months later, the Friars were on their improbable run to the Final Four, and Donovan had learned his first lesson about how to build a program. "I realized, because I experienced it, how important it was to raise a player's self-esteem," Donovan said. "My selfesteem was obviously very, very low when he came in there. I was sitting on the bench. And I think that belief and commitment by a coach in a player can really take a player to a different level.

Given his size, among other issues, Donovan's star turn at Providence didn't make him NBA material for long. After an un-noteworthy season with the New York Knicks, he took a job on Wall Street. Not a good fit. "It just was not for me at all," he said.

At first, Pitino urged him not to quit but later saw how miserable he was and hired him on as a graduate assistant at Kentucky. The rest, they might say, is history, except both coaches are still making it. Donovan is in his 16th year with the Gators and is back on an upward swing after a few down years following the titles. His most talented Not only did player this season? That would be freshman Bradley Beal, who scored 21 points Thursday in the win over Marquette that moved the Gators to this point.

'He didn't guarantee me anything when I came in,' said Beal, a national high school player of the year. "That's really what drew me into this school and this program is that he really didn't guarantee me anything, and I had to work for it all.

Donovan learned that — the part about not anointing players before they even put on a uniform - from Pitino, as well.

And as much as the upand-down style, the pressure defense and the reliance on the 3-pointer that Pitino has always taught, Donovan says he's learned about the commitment it takes for a coach to connect

"I tell everybody I hire that I'm not hiring an assistant coach; I'm hiring a future head coach, and I expect them to act like a head coach," Pitino said. "I expect them to be under the same pressure I'm under, where they drive themselves to the same limits. Billy was no different."

This wasn't only a one-way street. Pitino did some learning from his protege, as well.

This has been a season of ups and downs for the Cardinals, who rose as high as fourth in The Associated Press poll in December but impressed nobody during a 10-8 Big East regular season.

'That experience in 1987 always allowed me to dream," Pitino said. "I've always dreamed we could get here, one game away from the Final Four. I never thought we were out of it. I've never stopped dreaming because of what that team did."

Tar Heels outlast Ohio in OT

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Harrison Barnes scored five of his 12 points in overtime and top-seeded North Carolina escaped a huge upset with a 73-65 victory over 13thseeded Ohio on Friday night in the Midwest Regional semifinals.

Ohio, trying to become the first team seeded 13th or worse to make the regional finals since the NCAA tournament expanded in 1985, had a chance to convert a three-point play that would have given the Bobcats the lead with 25 seconds left in regulation. Walter Offutt missed from the line, however, and Ohio went 0 for 6 from the field in the first overtime of this year's tournament.

North Carolina (32-5), which has won 11 straight in the regional semifinals, plays Kansas, which defeated North Carolina State 60-57 Friday, on Sunday afternoon. The Tar Heels were playing without point guard Kendall Marshall, the steadying hand behind their fast-paced attack, and his absence clearly showed. They turned the ball over a season-high 24 times and could never get a handle on the smaller, quicker Bobcats.

North Carolina coach Roy Williams said he didn't think Marshall would be able to play Sunday, either.

SOUTH REGIONAL

■No. 3 Baylor 75, No. 10 Xavier 70: In Atlanta, Quincy Acy had 20 points and 15 rebounds to lift Baylor past Xavier and into its second regional final in three years.

The Bears will face Kentucky in Sunday's South Regional final.

The only senior in Baylor's starting lineup, Acy sank two free throws with 31 seconds remaining after Xavier cut the deficit to six.

North Carolina Tar Heels guard Harrison Barnes shoots against the Ohio Bobcats during the first half of their NCAA tournament Midwest Regional game Friday in St. Louis.

Mavericks sign ex-'Cat Kelenna Azubuike

DALLAS (AP) — The Mavericks have signed free agent Kelenna Azubuike, a former University of Kentucky star who hasn't played since tearing a knee tendon with Golden State two seasons ago.

The announcement Friday came a day after the Mavericks waived center Sean Williams to create a roster spot.

Azubuike spent four seasons with the Warriors and has career averages of 10.6 points and 4.0 rebounds.

The patella tendon injury happened nine games into the 2009-10 season. He was traded to New York in July 2010 but never played for the Knicks.

a 4-2 win over host Western Kentucky, it appears Joiner has fully adjusted to the college game.

"I think it's just once you're in it, you're in the fire," said Joiner, who is second on the Wildcats in hitting (.333). She also is third on the team in home runs (three), has two doubles, 11 RBIs and has scored 14 runs. "You don't really think about it, you iust have to do it.'

Joiner's father, David, was a two-sport star at Vanderbilt. He played a year-and-a-half of basketball before deciding to be a full-time baseball player. As a former SEC athlete, he said he knew his daughter would have a challenge her freshman season. "The main thing I told her is you might want to sit down and study some statistics because you're going to see a lot more strikeouts and that happens to everybody. It's just the level of play," David Joiner said. "And you're going to have to be able to cope with the fact there's going to be some negativity and you've had negativity but not at this level. She's handled that pretty well so far." Griffin learned quickly that her father knew best. She had dreamed of playing on UCLA's field after taking a trip there as a younger player for Christian County. As luck would have it, the Wildcats' first games this sea-

"She could arguably be the toughest kid on our team right now."

Rachel Lawson UK softball coach, son were at UCLA. Joiner homered in her fourth career at-bat.

"It was my only hit," she said. "It's definitely a challenge and there's lots of ups and downs. You just have to enjoy when it's going good and work through the hard times.

So, that's just how it goes." At the end of her senior season. Joiner's work in the classroom was as impressive as her work on the softball field. She had earned 29 college credit hours before she got to Lexington.

Her mother, Suzanne, said that hard work defines her daughter.

"I'm very proud she's there (Kentucky)," Suzanne Joiner said. "She worked hard her whole life. I'm happy for her because she's living her dream, doing what she wants to do."

And maybe a little more quickly than even Griffin thought. Brittany "B" Cervantes was the Wildcats' returning catcher.

She had broken team records as a junior with 55 runs scored and 48 walks. She also hit a career-high .329 and 15 home runs. Her on-base percentage was .490 with a slugging percentage of .677 and 52 RBIs. She also had six game-winning hits last year.

When asked about Cervantes' move to third base and Joiner's stranglehold on the Wildcats' everyday catcher spot, Joiner responded, "I don't really know how to answer that. I think it just worked out."

Despite her success at Kentucky, the former Christian County star said she still thinks about the Lady Colonels' disappointing loss to Hopkins County Central last year in the region semifinals that denied her a fourth straight trip to the state tournament. "All the time, all the time," she said. "I just think about how bad that felt and how hard you work and how you don't want that to ever be your last chance. So, I'm just glad I still have the opportunity to play.'

So are the Wildcats.

"She could arguably be the toughest kid on our team right now, which is pretty impressive considering she's a freshman and she's coming into the SEC," Lawson said. "She's been awesome and I'm glad we have her."

Four Turns

- FOURS ARE WILD Four different drivers piloting four different makes (Matt Kenseth/Ford, Denny Hamlin/Toyota, Tony Stewart/Chevy and Brad Keselowski/Dodge) have won the first four races of 2012 Cup season. The races have also been run on four different styles of track: plate, flat, intermediate and short.
- MORE FUN WITH NUMBERS Only one driver — Tony Stewart — has been in the top 10 of the Sprint Cup Series point standings after four races in each of the last five seasons.
- TIME FOR SOME MILK & COOKIES Hendrick Motorsports teammates Dale Earnhardt Jr. and Jeff Gordon made contact on lap 361 in the Food City 500 while racing inside of the top 10. Gordon's car suffered a cut tire and promptly spun into the wall, totalling his Chevy. "I absolutely feel responsible," Earnhardt said. "I got into his door a little bit. I put the pipes up against the left rear tire of the car. and knocked the side wall out of it. I feel bad about that." Earnhardt finished 15th, Gordon 35th.
- STEP IN THE RIGHT DIRECTION Michael Waltrip Racing had the best collaborative day in its short Cup Series history, placing drivers Clint Bowyer, Martin Truex Jr. and Brian Vickers in the top 5. The run was especially gratifying for Vickers, who has been without a ride since his former team, Red Bull Racing, shut down at the end of last season. "I'm going to enjoy it tonight and then we've got to go back to work tomorrow and think about Martinsville," Vickers said. "As fast as it can go this way, it can go the other way just as quick."

Brad Keselowski outlasts Matt Kenseth to win second straight race at Bristol

NASCAR Hall of Famers Cale Yarborough (nine wins), Darrell Waltrip (12) and Dale Earnhardt (nine) each went on dominant runs at Bristol in the 1970s and '80s. Rusty Wallace won nine of his own from 1986-2000. Jeff Gordon won five events from 1995-2002, while the Busch brothers, Kurt and Kyle, also have five wins each.

Following Sunday's Food City 500, it appears a new name may be added to the exclusive list of Bristol dominators.

Brad Keselowski scored his second straight win at BMS, leading a race-high 289 laps — including the last 111 consecutively — en route to his first win of the 2012 season.

Crew Chief's Take: "The key to victory at Auto Club Speedway is having a car with great balance. The track is known for long green flag runs, and the car tends to get looser the longer you run. It's a delicate balance because you have to be loose to start a run. A tight racecar is no good either, but the driver has to be able to hold on to it. That is a very fine line."

Auto Club Speedway

It was a weekend many fans in NASCAR Nation viewed as the ultimate blasphemy, as the California Speedway hosted its first Labor Day weekend date in 2004, replacing Darlington's Southern 500 high holy day.

Elliott Sadler didn't seem to mind, though.

The Virginia native, driving the No. 38 M&M's Yates Racing Ford, took the lead of the Pop Secret 500 on a restart with 27 laps remaining and held off Kasey Kahne and Mark Martin to win his last Cup victory to date by .263 sec-Martin had a fast car as the laps wound down, but he could not get around Kahne on the race's final restart with 10 laps remaining. That allowed Sadler to scamper away and win uncontested. In the championship battle, Jeff Gordon surrendered the points lead to Jimmie Johnson when his No. 24 blew an engine with 41 laps remaining.

Dale Earnhardt Jr.

1. Greg Biffle The Bristol pole winner left the mountains of Tennessee in 13th, but the three top-3 finishes prior to Sunday keep Biffle atop the list for yet another week. 2. Jimmie Johnson After the 48 team's appeal was overturned, it's sunshine and roses in the land of Jimmie Johnson. Now on to one of his best tracks, in Southern California, where he has a series-best five wins. 3. Matt Kenseth First- and second-place finishes bookend 13th- and 22nd-place downers. Expect another top-5 run at Auto Club Speedway this weekend — it's Kenseth's type of track. 4. Kevin Harvick Credit the 29 team for making chicken salad out of its day following a wreck on lap 25. Harvick's worst finish through four races remains an 11th. #OneGoal. 5. Brad Keselowski Showed on Sunday why many consider Keselowski and the No. 2 team championship contenders. They used strategy, skill and a powerful car to outrun a competitive field on a tough track. 6. Clint Bowyer Bowyer and crew chief Brian Pattie were paired during the offseason. The chemistry seems to have taken hold after consecutive runs of sixth and fourth — not to mention an 11th at Daytona. 7. Tony Stewart Smoke has only one finish better than 14th this season, but he made it count with a win in Vegas. This just proves that he's capable of jumping up and winning on any given weekend. 8. Carl Edwards Bitten by the Big One at Bristol. Carl and crew will be fine — as their pair of top 10s can attest — but the lack of laps led is a bit concerning (and surprising). 9. Dale Earnhardt Jr. Regardless of how well Junior runs the first half of any given race, he seems to dip into the 10th- to 15th-place range by the end of the day. Until further notice, that's what this team is. 10. Denny Hamlin A pair of top 5s to begin the season have given way to a pair of 20th-place runs. Wrong way, Denny.

11. Joey Logano No one is confusing Logano for a title contender, but he's trending in the right direction.

12. Paul Menard Has very quietly pieced together three top 10s in the first four races. 13. Martin Truex Jr. Spearheaded Michael Waltrip Racing's banner day in Bristol.

14. Kyle Busch Results have been bad, but this driver and team are too good to stay down long.

15. Jeff Burton Nice start to the season with three top 15s after a dismal year in 2011. Just off the lead pack: Marcos Ambrose, Jeff Gordon, Kasey Kahne, Jamie McMurray, Ryan Newman

Warm weather has largemouth anglers happy

he largemouth bite is good on both Kentucky and Barkley lakes and is in a late winter pattern. But that should change real soon. The crappie bite is being reported as improved. The catfish are holding offshore and the bite is reported as good.

Both lakes are presently nearly two feet over winter pool levels. You can get up to date information on both lakes by visiting www.kentuckylake.com. The water conditions are stained on both lakes with water temperatures in the mid to upper 50's. You can monitor water levels and generation schedules for both lakes at higher. The long rang reports have the warming trend continuing and this combined with a few showers should have the largemouth moving shallow a little earlier than in past years.

The majority of the largemouth are still being taken on primary points and ledges on the main lakes as well as on deep pea gravel bars. These fish like so many others this year are falling victim to the Alabama rigs, swim baits, suspending jerk baits and jigs. Reports also have largemouth moving into transition banks and secondary points.

Transition banks are usually steeper banks with 5 to 12 feet of water and are used by all fish to move from deeper water to secondary points or shallow flats. The better transition banks will have good chunk rock and wood cover and can be located on the main lake or in the creeks and bays.

These fish will hit shallow to mid-range crankbaits, jerk baits, finesse jigs and the Alabama and Tennessee rig. Riprap and chunk rock banks are always good placing to start your search this time of year, especially if you find this type of cover on a primary or secondary point with deep water nearby. Keep in mind as the water temperatures come up so will the largemouth.

Local anglers report the smallmouth bass as good. These fish are being taken on main lake points and on the first secondary points in the mouths of the creeks and bays. These fish are being taken on jerkbaits, crankbaits, and jigs and of course the Alabama or Tennessee rig.

Local anglers are reporting the crappie bite as improved. Reports have good numbers of crappie being caught over staging brush piles in 7-12 feet of water in creeks on small jigs and minnows. These fish are also being taken over brush in 15-20 feet of water along the old creek channels on the main lake by vertical jigging with small tube jigs tipped with crappie nibbles. Information for this report was provided by Dave Stewart of Bass Buster Guide Service and other

March fishing madness:

Neighborhood lakes make for successful, fun trips

BY ART LANDER JR. KENTUCKY AFIFI D

FRANKFORT, Kv. - A recent survey conducted at eight Fishing in Neighborhoods (FINs) lakes across Kentucky found the program both popular and helpful in recruiting new anglers "Feedback has been positive," said Fisheries Biologist Dane Balsman, who manages the program for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. "About 85 percent of the anglers surveyed rated their overall fishing trip satisfaction as good or excellent." program, FINs The which started in 2006 with five pilot lakes, now includes 35 lakes in 22 counties, with the addition of Madisonville City Park Lake this spring. The 14acre impoundment in Hopkins County brings the total acreage enrolled in the program to 194.5.

Other encouraging findings from the survey were that 10 percent of anglers never previously bought a fishing license and 25 percent had not bought a fishing license the previous year. "Through the program, we are retaining previous license buyers and recruiting new ones," said Balsman.

'That's one of our goals." Fishing license sales, excise taxes on fishing equipment and a 25 percent in-kind match from local governments fund the FINs program and annual stockings of fish.

Creating good fishing opportunities close to cities is a main goal of the program. Balsman said about 2.2 million people, or about half of Kentucky's population, live in the 22 counties where the FINs lakes are located. This year the plan is to stock more than 230,000 fish — 132,500 nine- to 12inch rainbow trout and 98,650 12- to 16-inch catfish. These fish are large enough to be harvested at the time they are stocked.

The special creel and size limits in effect on the FINs lakes spread out fish harvest, providing fishing opportunities for maximum number of anglers. The standardized regulations of all 35 FINs lakes include a daily limit of five rainbow trout with no minimum size limit and a daily limit of four channel and blue catfish with no minimum size limit. There is a one-fish daily limit on largemouth bass with a 15-inch minimum size limit and a 15-fish daily limit on bluegill and other sunfish with no minimum size limit. Next spring, anglers will have a new fish to add to their stringers. "From our survey we found that a lot of anglers like to catch sunfish, so we're adding hybrid bluegill to the stocking plan," said Balsman. "It's a sterile, fastgrowing cross between a bluegill and a green sunfish. Production has already started at the Pfeiffer Hatchery."

The hybrid bluegills will be stocked beginning next spring on a lake-by-lake basis with some fish held in reserve for special

Despite all the successes, lenges for the FINs program. "We're close to the saturation point on the number of lakes we can have in the program," said Balsman. "This is because we're near capacity for the number of fish we can produce at our hatcheries." For more detailed information on Kentucky's FINs program, including lake maps and directions, fish stocking schedules and fishing regulations, visit the department's website at fw.ky.gov and click onto the "Fishing in Neighborhoods" logo.

KDFWR begins crappie project

FROM KDFWR RELEASE

FRANKFORT, Ky. - The Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources will remove stunted white crappie from Boltz Lake in Grant County beginning at dusk on Monday, March 26.

The fisheries division plans to utilize electrofishing boats to remove 5- to 8-inch white crappie for restocking into Taylorsville Lake in Spencer County. "Even though these crappie are small in size, they are mature fish that will spawn this year in Taylorsville Lake," said Gerry Buynak, assistant director of fisheries for Kentucky Fish and Wildlife. "With hope, this will improve the white crappie population in Taylorsville Lake which has declined in recent years."

The removal of stunted white crappie from Boltz Lake promotes growth in the crappie and benefits other species remaining in the lake. This will provide anglers better fishing opportunities in the future. This effort is part of the active management plan to improve fishing on

Jimmie Johnson, NASCAR take opposing lessons from appeal

BY GREG BEACHAM

FONTANA, Calif. — Jimmie Johnson insists his car was perfectly legal at the Daytona 500, and he believes NASCAR's chief appellate officer proved it this week by rescinding most of the penalties levied against crew chief Chad Knaus.

Through the appeal process, we've proved that those C-posts were legal," the five-time champion driver said Friday

NASCAR President Mike Helton reached the opposite conclusion from the same process, and he points to Knaus' $100,000 fine left intact by chief appellate officer John Middlebrook as evidence.

'That tells you that the inspection process was correct, and there was an issue with the car," Helton said.

No wonder much of the garage at Auto Club Speedway is surprised and confused as they get back to work this weekend in Johnson's native Southern California.

At least Johnson and Helton both feel it's time to move on from the debate that could have ruined Johnson's season shortly after it began.

"I guess this is one of those positions where we agree to disagree," Johnson said. Helton staunchly defended Middlebrook against criticism of Tuesday's surprising ruling, rejecting presumptions of a bias toward Hendrick Motorsports. Helton also defended the autocratic nature of Middlebrook's job, which doesn't require him to give any rationale for his decisions. 'We believe the decision that was made this week supports the inspection process," Helton said. "Because the elements of the penalty that were upheld indicate that ... the inspectors did their job correctly. I think the debate this week was about the decision after that point, and we reacted to it. We believe very strongly in our inspection process, and I'm very proud of it.'

Knaus was fined and suspended for six races along with car chief Ron Malec, and Johnson was docked 25 points after the No. 48 car failed opening day inspection at Daytona. The inspectors visually determined the sheet metal between the roof and side windows had been illegally modified to create an aerodynamic advantage.

After a three-member panel unanimously upheld body thought Johnson and the oft-scrutinized Knaus had much of a chance to successfully appeal that heavy punishment. Instead, Middlebrook put

'Hunger Games' should satisfy fans

BY CHRISTY LEMIRE AP MOVIE CRITIC

Fans should be thoroughly satisfied with the faithfulness of Gary Ross' film, with its propulsive nature and vivid imagery: a mix of decadent costumes and architecture and harsh, unforgiving exteriors. At its center is Jennifer Lawrence, an ideal choice to play this strong, independent young woman. Those who saw her Oscar-nominated performance in 2010's "Winter's Bone" already were aware of her startling screen pres-

A post-apocalyptic version of North America has been divided into 12 districts. Every year, a teenage boy and girl from each are selected randomly at the "Reaping" and sent to the opulent, art deco Capitol, where they're made over, trained and primed to fight each other until one is left standing in the sprawling arena. Gamesmakers manipulate their surroundings, and every minute of competition is breathlessly broadcast to the nation, with viewers rooting for and bet-the drama and the tears feel real, and they're not overplayed. Katniss' male counterpart is Peeta Mellark (Josh Hutcherson), the baker's sweet but bland son. Together they're to receive mentoring from the frequently inebriated Haymitch (Woody Harrelson), the last winner from District 12 Elizabeth Banks is nearly unrecognizable as Effie, their garish, perky escort. They also undergo mandated makeovers from their stylist, Cinna (Lenny Kravitz in an inspired bit of casting — he and Lawrence have a lovely rap-

Constant fighting paces 'The Raid'

BY JAKE COYLE

AP ENTERTAINMENT WRITER

The film speed of 24 frames-persecond barely outruns the relentless pace of pummeling that thumps through the Indonesian martial arts flick "The Raid: Redemption.

Hollywood's eye for talent is acute for nothing so much as an action director, and in Gareth Huw Evans, it hopes to have found a filmmaker to resurrect the fist-flying genre of Bruce Lee. The Welsh filmmaker has mined the Indonesian fighting style of Silat, which he first sought out to document and then fictionalized in the little-seen 2009 film "Merantau.'

"The Raid," fashioned as a prequel to "Merantau," was made with much of the same team, including Iko Uwais, who both plays our hero, Rama, and choreographed the fighting.

Narrative complexity is not a relevant quality to "The Raid," which Evans also wrote and edited. Like John Carpenter's "Assault on Precinct 13," it's set almost entirely in one location: a dilapidated, monolithic, 15-story high rise in Jakarta.

A 20-member SWAT team is storming the building to turn out the crime lord Tama (Ray Sahetapy) who has fashioned an impenetrable lair out of the tall slum. He waits on the 15th floor with henchmen Mad Dog (Yayan Ruhian, also a fight choreographer) and Andi (Doni Alamsyah) at his side, an army of gang members at the ready and floors of poor tenants who'll do his bid-ence — her natural beauty, instincts and maturity beyond her years. And yet there's a youthful energy and even a vulnerability that make her relatable to the core, target audience of female fans. Lawrence is endlessly watchable, and she better be, since she's in nearly every single shot of Ross' film. The script adheres rather closely to Collins' novel — no surprise there since she co-wrote it with Ross and Billy Ray—although it does truncate some of the subplots that give the book its greatest emotional heft as well as soften the brutal violence of the games themselves, ostensibly in the name of securing a PG-13 rating. Still, the makers of "The Hunger Games" have managed the difficult feat of crafting a film that feels both epic and in-	ing on their favorit Katniss lives with and beloved younge listant District 12, l and mining — a play ent of the Ozarks of expert hunter with pends her days seed ly in the forest with he strongest mome he action sequence end to look a bit c quieter exchanges li and Hemsworth effor But when Prim's Reaping, Katniss sy colunteer instead. cenes in which yo ead the book to feel	ther widowed rer sister, Prim, known for its pace visually ref "Winter's Bora bow and arroking food for he her best fried Hemsworth). The Los Angeles Angels picked up the biggest free agent in the offseason in former St. Louis Cardinals' star Albert Pujols. The Angels hope Pujols can lead them to the American League pennant and the 2012 World Series crown.

West Liberty teens will step out to prom in Style FROM THE KENTUCKY PRESS NEWS SERVICE

Franklin County volunteers are packing up hundreds of dresses and heading to tornado-ravaged West Liberty to make sure the girls there have a proper prom despite the chaos. Amy Nance is coordinator of Cinderella's Closet, a local effort to give free prom dresses and accessories to low-income teens. Nance says a teacher at Morgan County High School called her after finding the organization online. She said every girl in the school—about 200 of them—needed a dress in time for prom April She was worried there wouldn't be enough dresses because girls in Franklin and surrounding counties had already picked theirs earlier this month. But that wasn't a problem, Nance said. Cin-

Nance visited West Liberty for the first time Tuesday.

"Everybody has a story," she said.

"When you drive through their downtown area, it's completely gone — there's no building that's untouched."

Nance is looking for donations of jewelry, shoes and snacks. Monetary contributions and volunteers are also needed.

Here's how to help:

■Donate new or gently used dress shoes in a variety of sizes. Silver, black, gold or clear shoes are preferred.

■Give money to help with the purchase of shoes. Checks should be made out to First United Methodist Church with Cinderella's Closet in the memo. The church address is 211 Washington St., Frankfort, KY 40601.

■Donate new or used rhinestone jewelry. Organizers need 200 sets bracelet, earrings, and necklace. Longer necklaces for plus-size girls are especially needed, Nance said. Donations should be dropped off at the First United Methodist Church office ASAP (deadline is Wednesday, March 28).

Give large bags of candy. Nance said organizers want to give each girl a goody bag, which will include individually wrapped candy andsuckers. This should be dropped off at the church office by Friday.

■Volunteer. Nance says she needs 60 volunteers to travel to West Liberty the day of the event — about half that many have already signed up.

Volunteers will work approximately six hours straight to assist 200 girls. Volunteers need to bring a case (12- or 24-pack) of water and/or drinks to share and their own personal snacks. Sandwiches will be came from all over the area on a recent Saturday morning to help clean up and restore Boiling Spring Cemetery. The effort to save the historic black cemetery — moved from its original spot on Fort Campbell 70 years ago and relocated on Britton Springs Road — was the idea of Clarksville resident and amateur historian Jackie Collins, who made a plea for volunteers last month.

THE LEAF-CHRONICLE

CLARKSVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — In

a strong showing of community spirit and volunteerism, people

On a Saturday, Collins was joined by about 50 to 60 volunteers representing civic organizations and Clarksville, churches from Nashville and Fort Campbell, including the Buffalo Soldiers Motorcycle Club, missionaries of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latterday Saints, Boy Scouts, Austin Peay State University faculty, Fort Campbell Community Chapel members and members of the Boiling Spring Baptist Church congregation, which owns the property.

Bi-County Solid Waste Management also showed up to lend a welcome hand with a six-man crew and equipment, including a front loader and tractor-trailer.

Speaking for the Buffalo Soldiers group, Jonas "Ice" Cloud said that the members were no strangers to cleaning up cemeteries, having a lot of experience through working with the Mt. Olive Cemetery Historical Preservation Society.

Asked if he was surprised at the number of people volunteering to work on a Saturday morning, he said, "No, I'm not. Here in Clarksville, the community comes together all the time to help out."

Representing the LDS group, half of whom were from Nashville, Elder Heath said, "We just love to help people. We heard about this opportunity from other LDS missionaries in Nashville and decided to take part."

Marcel Boleware, another LDS member, said, "I almost didn't come, but absolutely want to get daughter, Ella, said 'Daddy, across is that this was I want to come and do some a labor of love." He smiled at her as she worked Amateur historian Jackie Collins next to him and On restoring Boiling Spring Cemetery added, "She's an exemplar to me."

Moniqueka Gold of Boiling Spring Baptist Church said she was grateful for all of the people who had come out.

"We have a small congregation," she said, "mostly older, and we need the help."

Surprising finds

In a short period of time, the volunteers had already made a big dent in raking up leaves and removing debris, including several large dead trees. In the process, they uncovered a number of previously undiscovered graves.

Volunteer and Montgomery County archivist Jill Hastings-Johnson said that as debris was cleared out, the pattern of rows in the cemetery was also becoming visible. As each grave was uncovered, she placed out orange flags to mark the spot for future reference. Together with Collins, she had previously identified as many as 120 burials in the cemetery based on death certificates.

Most were from the Boiling Spring Community that existed on what is now Fort Campbell before

However, Hastings-Johnson said that she had discovered records of at least 18 graves moved from another cemetery that she didn't until recently.

By the end of day's cleanup, Collins said that the cleanup crew had identified at least 300 graves.

"That's just the beginning," he said.

He attributed the high number to the fact that prior to 1914, no death certificates were kept.

The old cemetery in the Boiling Spring Community had been in existence for at least 39 years before that, and the only way to know how many people were buried on the Britton Spring property would be to somehow locate the government records detailing the removal process. "It would be like finding a needle in a havstack," Collins said.

Despite the daunting task, he is glad that the process has started and came out again with more volunteers on March 10.

"The one thing I absolutely want to get across," Collins emphasized, " is that this was a labor of love. I want to thank all of the people and organizations that came out here to help, with a special thank you to Jill Hastings-Johnson from the county archives, who has stuck with me from the beginning.'

Family's alpha dog chases sister away

DEAR AMY: I am one of five children — three boys and two girls. We are all middle-aged and older.

The youngest girl is the "alpha dog" of our family. She is always in charge. She has a big personality. She is witty, loud and the life of the party. ASK

My problem is that I am ignored at family gatherings and come away stressed out and unable to sleep for weeks without sleeping pills. This has been going on for years, but I have never talked to the family about this.

Our last parent re-

Do you have any advice or comments? — Sleepless Sister DEAR SISTER: This family dynamic might have taken hold in childhood. Now that your parents are gone, you can count on this dynamic changing — perhaps radically. Granted, there is a chance that the dynamic might become even more pronounced, but it will definitely change. Family life is complex; alliances shift and change.

If being with your family causes you weeks of stress and sleeplessness, you should avoid them until you can come up with strategies to cope with the relationships.

You will do best if you can forge individual relationships with your siblings, based on your temperaments and shared history.

A professional counselor could help you with this. Also, check out the book, "Disarming the Narcissist: Surviving and Thriving with the Self-Absorbed" by Wendy Behary (2008, New Harbinger Publications).

DEAR AMY: It has been more than three months, and I have not received a thank-vou note for a wedding gift (a card with cash enclosed).

I know I should have written a check, but I placed the card in a decorative box that was provided at the reception. How can I find out if the couple received the card? If it was lost or stolen! Should I give them another gift? — Worried

DEAR WORRIED: Contact the couple to ask if they received your gift.

Unfortunately, a decorative box, while being a handy receptacle for cards, is also something of a target for

Say to the couple, "I haven't heard from you that you received my gift, and now I'm wondering if it might have been lost in the crush at the reception. If you'd let me know quickly I'd feel much better.'

If it was lost or stolen, you do not have to repeat the process.

DEAR AMY: The trend of women keeping their maiden names as their last names may have peaked.

However, at least among my own circles of late-marrying professional women in a wide variety of careers, the trend has become that Susie MiddleName MaidenName becomes Susie MaidenName HisLastName upon

This preserves continuity with the name by which she's known in her professional career established before marriage, but also provides family identity with the spouse and kids. — ARB

DEAR ARB: I resist the concept of the "maiden name" altogether — it's just my name. But the demographic statistics don't lie — for women, keeping one's name upon marriage has become rarer in the last decade.

How to best spend your tax refund t's tax time again. In 2011, more than half of tax payers received a refund with an average yield of more than $3,000. For many Americans, this payment may be the largest lump sum received during the year. Although it might be tempting to spend your tax refund on something fun, it is important to develop a plan to use the refund to help meet financial goals for 2012.

If you expect a tax refund this year, plan now to ensure the best use of the money. First, consider splitting the refund. The IRS will allow you to split it into different accounts. Splitting your tax refund is similar to having your employer or bank split your paycheck between savings and checking accounts.

Statistics show that if you deposit your paycheck directly into your checking account, you will save less than if you split the deposit between checking and savings. The same principle applies to your tax refund. You can split it whether you file electronically or by mail. Take advantage of this and designate money for spending, retirement savings, building an emergency fund or other financial goals. Once the money is deposited, stick with your plan.

Plan on paper how you will spend your refund. Start by identifying two or three financial goals for 2012, then determine how you can use the refund to help reach those goals. For example, do you want to pay off credit card debt? If so, set aside a portion of your refund to make an additional payment on your highest interest credit-card or possibly pay off the smallest debt entirely.

Also, consider ways to use your tax refund to increase your family's financial stability. Build an emergency fund aiming to have three to six months of living expenses in a savings account. Finally, look at your monthly budget. Set aside money now to pay upcoming expenses or save for a family vacation to avoid credit card debt.

During tax time, many tax preparers as well as car lots, payday loan services and other retail outlets offer refund anticipation loans or rapid refunds. Many people see a refund anticipation loan as an opportunity to get their tax refund faster. However, it is a loan and as with any loan, they can be expensive. Instead of choosing a refund anticipation loan, file taxes electronically and receive your refund by direct deposit, which on average, takes 10 business days for the IRS to process

If you do not have a bank account, you can receive your refund on a prepaid debit card. If you are considering a refund anticipation loan, be certain to ask the interest rate, other fees being charged and the penalty if your actual refund is less than the loan

If you receive a tax refund this year, you may consider changing your withholding amount, or the amount of taxes deducted from your paycheck. Ideally, you do not want to receive or owe the IRS any money at the end of year. If you receive a refund, you are overpaying throughout the year or allowing the government to borrow your money interest-free.

The average tax refund in 2011 was $3,000. That is an additional $250 per month that could be used to pay down debt, build an emergency fund, increase retirement contributions or work toward other financial goals. It is easy to change the amount of taxes withheld from your paycheck by adiusting vour W-4. Check with your employer to update this form and the recommended withholding amount, which is determined by marital status and the number of allowances or dependents you claim.

The IRS also has a withholding calculator available online at www.irs.gov/individuals/, under the tools tab. If your family situation changes throughout the year, you can update your W-4 at any time.

Rain barrels 'an easy way to go green' in your garden

(AP) — Robin Blair does what she can to help her plants thrive. She plants them in good soil and keeps the weeds away. She also waters them regularly with rainwater captured in barrels in the yard of Shrewsbury, Collecting the water is easy, she says, and good for her plants and the environment.

"Rainwater is void of chemicals. It's kinder to plants and landscaping," says Blair, who has two rain barrels and a cistern tied into her gutter system. "Water is a precious resource. Why not collect rainwater and reuse it?"

Blair is such a proponent that she got trained to teach other gardeners how to make and use rain barrels. When she organized a workshop last spring, she was surprised at how many people wanted to attend. "We kept getting more and more orders,

Rain-barrel use and classes are on the rise around the country, according to gardening and conservation experts. Although the concept of capturing and rainwater has existed for thousands of years, many gardeners and environmentalists are revisiting it because of concerns about storm-water runoff and water conservation.

"It's one of our more popular classes," Madeline Samec, a horticultural program assistant with the St. Johns County Extension Agency in St. Augustine, Fla. "We al-most don't have to adver-

Most rain barrels hold around 55 gallons of water and are connected to a downspout. They nor-mally have an overflow pipe that detours excess water away from a home's foundation, and a filter that prevents mosquitoes from entering. Rain barrels also have a tap that can be used to fill watering cans or connect to a hose.

A 55-gallon barrel connected to a 1,000-squarefoot roof will fill up during a 1-inch rain. The barrels can be purchased for $50 to $120 each, or constructed out of food-grade drums. In addition to watering the garden, some people use rainwater for koi ponds or aquariums, says Dotty Woodson, extension program specialist for water resources at Texas AgriLife Extension Service in Dallas.

She said many rain-barrel users like that rainwater does not contain chlorine, fluoride or other chemicals that municipalities use to treat water.

While investing in a rain barrel does help the environment, it's not likely to shave a lot off of a home-

In this 2009 image released by Alice Snider, a decorated rain barrel, "Butterfly Garden," is connected to a downspout in a backyard, where it will capture rainwater for watering garden beds. Rain barrel usage is on the rise around the country, according to gardening and conserowner's water bill, Wood-

"People might come to the class with the idea that it's going to save them money but we're very, very honest about that," she says. "It won't have a huge impact. The environmental issue is what we're

A rain barrel can be connected to a gutter system without too much difficulty, the experts said. First, homeowners need to remove a section of downspout and replace it with flexible tubing. When the rain barrel is in use, the tubing should run from the downspout to the barrel. When the rain barrel is not in use, the tubing should reconnect back to the downspout.

Rain barrels are "a very easy way to go green," says Mandy Stark, marketing and outreach specialist for the city of Lenexa, Kan., which promotes their use through a public art display. Every summer, the city places painted rain barrels around town to encourage residents to install them.

Those who do "feel they're making a tangible difference - that they're actually doing something that protects the environment," Stark says.

Many municipalities experience a 30 percent to 40 percent increase in residential water usage in the summer. Rain barrels can help reduce that.

Diverting and collecting rainwater also lessens water pollution in streams, rivers and lakes. When rainwater travels over impervious surfaces - such as parking lots, roads and driveways - it collects pollutants, which often end up in local bodies of water.

Rain barrels don't require much maintenance, says Jen Willoughby, an environmental educator with the Interstate Commission on the Potomac River Basin, in Rockville, Md.

Just make sure to keep the screen clean throughout the season, she says. And in cold climates, disconnect the barrels and store them upside down during the winter.

Paul Hlavinka, president of the Muddy Branch Alliance, an environmental group in Gaithersburg, Md., agrees that rain barrels are a relatively easy way to make a difference.

"I love to go out and look at it," he said. "You don't realize how much water is coming off your roof until you go out and look."

Learning to read nature's cues can help a gardener

(AP) — Phenology is the science of appearances, or knowing which plants can tell you when to start weeding, planting, fighting insects or tackling any other gardening priority.

Once the forsythia begins to bloom, for instance, it's time to renew your war against crabgrass.

When to fertilize the lawn? Think apple blossoms falling. Time to set out tomatoes? Yes, if dogwood trees are in flower.

"Phenology makes us more aware of our environment," said Robert Polomski, a hor-ticulturist and arborist at Clemson University in Clemson, S.C. "Associating gardening tasks with flowering times is a neat way to look at how nature really functions. Forsythia grows most everywhere in Zones 5-8. Its yellow blossoms are among the most recognizable signs of early spring, making this member of the olive family one of the best seasonal indicators for gardeners. Turf grass specialists often use the bloom time of forsythia as a bellwether for scattering pre-emergent herbicides on crabgrass-prone lawns.

"A garden weed preventer or pre-emergent kills the seeds before they can grow into seedlings," Polomski said.

Phenology blends science with legend. It charts plant and animal development, and how those are influenced by climate change over long periods of time. It also includes the observations of people who have worked the ground for generations. Scientists know, for instance, that soil temperatures must reach at least 35 degrees before onion and lettuce seeds will germinate. But Felder Rushing, a former extension horticulturist, 10th generation American gardener and folklorist from Jackson, Miss., puts it in a more homespun and equally correct way: "When fishermen are sitting on the riverbank instead of on their bait buckets, the soil is warm enough to plant."

ostas are one tough plant. Their hardiness, attractive foliage and flowers and ease to grow make them a great addition to any garden.

Hostas grow best in fully shaded or partially shaded locations. Ideal partshade sites are those that receive morning sun and afternoon shade. The majority of hostas, if grown in hot sunny sites, will develop scorched leaves. Some hostas with light green to chartreuse colored leaves can tolerate a few hours of afternoon sun. These include "solar flare," "August moon," "honeybell," and "sun power" (considered the most sun-tolerant). These cultivars perform best when the soil is kept reasonably moist. Even the leaf edges of sun-tolerant hostas will scorch under hot, dry conditions.

Hostas tolerate a variety of soil conditions in- GARDEN cluding clay.

Well-drained soil, high in organic matter which holds some moisture is best. The addition of organic matter such as compost improves the soil and creates better growing conditions.

The leaves of the hosta originate from a crown in a rosette and form layers in a mound shape. Depending on the cultivar, the mounds JACKSON may range from 6 inches to 3 feet tall and spread 8 inches to 5 feet wide. This variety means there is a cultivar for any space large or small. Various leaf shapes and characteristics help create interest in the garden. Hosta leaves may be long and narrow, heart-shaped, cupped or broad and are often described as glossy, seersucker, wavy, puckered, ruffled and heavily

Available leaf colors are mind-boggling with solids and multiple variegations. Examples of blue-green hosta cultivars include "blue wedgewood," "halcyon," "blue angel," "love pat" and "krossa regal."

Green cultivars include "royal standard," "green ruffles" and "honey-bells." Light green to yellow-green cultivars include "August moon," "sum and substance," "solar flare" and "sun power." Multicolored leaves include combinations of a solid color listed above with the addition of white or Color combinations form patterns on the leaf. For instance, white may edge a green leaf like "francee" or white could be mixed into green like "white beauty." "Frances Williams" is a large hosta with blue-green leaves edged with a gold yellow border. "Gold standard" has golden vellow leaves rimmed with blue-green.

Hostas also have white or violet flower stalks. The trumpet or bellshaped flowers are held above the foliage on spikes that may reach 6 to 28 inches above the foliage. Hostas bloom during June, July, August or September depending on the cultivar. Some cultivars like "royal standard," "so sweet" and "honeybells" have fragrant

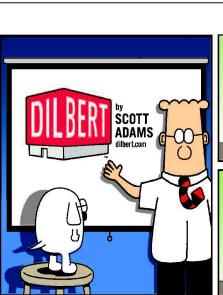

Due to the shade and moist environments where the hosta grows, slugs can be a problem. Hostas with thicker foliage may not suffer as much damage as other cultivars. Examples of hosta cultivars with thicker foliage include 'sum and substance," "sagae," "big daddy" and "blue angel." Hostas are used many ways in the landscape. Those reaching 3 feet tall make great backgrounds for other plants. Small and medium-sized cultivars are used for edging sidewalks, pathways and patios. Many cultivars are suited for patio containers including "blue moon," "pixie power" and "rock garden." Protect hostas in patio containers from freezing by sinking the container below ground level during the winter.

The best time to divide hosta is in the spring when the leaves start to emerge as curled up pointed spikes. The entire clump can be removed and cut apart with a sharp spade or knife into pie-shaped pieces. Also, a pie-shaped wedge can be removed from the clump while it is still in the ground. For best performance, some hosta may need dividing about every 10 years; this depends on the cultivar and growing conditions. When a plant produces fewer flowers and the crowns become tightly packed, it may be time to divide

Layers make lasting impression on fashion

Thousands of outfits later, with probably every hemline, color and silhouette turning up somewhere on the runways of New York, London, Milan and Paris, fashion insiders have started to focus on trends they think will have the most influence on style in the second half of the

There was a wearability to many of the clothes paraded in front of retailers, editors and stylists, which might not have made the most exciting show seasons, but could translate into solid sales.

"Designers are understanding that women don't dress in gowns, says Brandon Holley, editor-in-chief of Lucky magazine. "It was all about pieces you could work with. Now the question is, what can you break down wardrobe?'

Colleen Sherin, senior fashion director at Saks Fifth Avenue, says the "big idea" that stuck with her throughout the previews was one of eclectic elegance. It's a more democratic style that more women will be able to participate in, she notes, because it's not about a single must-have piece, it's about creating an overall look that can be achieved with the individual pieces that best suit your body

Five trends that were strong in the four big fashion capitals: layered separates, interesting fabrics, coats, military and melan-■Lavered separates: Forget the simple dress and be ready to add a few extra minutes to your morning routine to put together your outfit, says Linda Wells, Allure magazine editor-in-chief.

Underneath all the layers were some wearable pants and trousers that, Lucky's Holley predicts, will be popular. Shoppers have already shown interest in all the colored pants that have emerged as an early trend for spring.

"A lot of the pants are menswear-inspired. It's not 'menswear' but it has the feeling of being separate pieces with a businesslike vibe," Holley said.

■Interesting fabrics: Rich luxe fabrics in rich luxe colors such as burgundy, bottle green and teal mean a stepped-up sophistication for clothes without blingy bells and whistles. Envision brocades, jacquards metallic tweeds.

"The gorgeous colors are flattering for so many women, and they look great in the decorative fabrications and translate into outerwear, another important trend," says Saks' Sherin.

And, she says, get some leather, especially if it's a mixed-media coat, perhaps leather sleeves on a cashmere coat, or panels of leather on a shearling.

Allure's Wells noted leather T-shirts, pants and dresses, too. Leather used like lace in the Alexander McQueen collection was pure art, she says.

The leather goes with the rough edge that seemed to guide many designers this season, she says "There's definit bit of a tough look.'

■Coats: Coats are a good investment piece because you get so much use out of them, Holley says. A coat is a workhorse in a way that a great dress or even great black pants cannot be, she explains. "You can wear your new coat many times and (for) many seasons."

As a look, she favored the trench coat silhouette with a pair of slim-fit pants and a beautiful flat

Sherin says shoppers will have other options, ranging from peacoats and duffels to sporty, puffy jackets. There were fancy embellished coats and even those with gilded embroidery at Dolce & Gabbana.

"Statement coats is something we'll be buying into," she says.

■Military: Military touches, including epaulets, patch pockets and metallic hardware, were consistent, although there was not a literal translation of camo and Brooks, who attended shows as fashion director for Barneys New York. (She announced her resignation from the post this

There was a sort of yin and yang with the strength that comes from straightforward military styles that was balanced by those elegant — and expensive — fabrics. "A simple item with a high price will be harder to sell than a simple item in high fabrics that look expensive, Brooks says, noting specifically Marni's military pockets on fur shrugs

■Melancholy: was an overall darkness to the collections, from the Wells. There were important flashes of embellishment that added some levity and whimsy, but Wells pictured a muse in the spirit of Leo Tolstoy's Anna Karenina. "It was all about the romance of the ill-fated lover. ... It was not a sad statement, but a poetic, romantic sad with indulgence."

Cuts of clothes were sometimes severe and had a seriousness in the details. It was not quite Goth, Wells says, but almost.

That vibe played into the covered-up sensuality that also cast its spell over the catwalks, Sherin adds. Instead of plunging Vs, there were high necklines, for example, but strategic use of sheer fabrics kept it all very modern, she explains. "It was revealing and concealing at the

Fashion loosens up 1920s style

NEW YORK (AP) — Fashion influences from the Jazz Age are making some noise this spring. Dropped-waist dresses, sporty knits, fringe and long necklaces are among the trends born from the groundbreaking, looser look that first emerged in the 1920s. They're a blend of an unfussy attitude while maintaining a polished ap-

Everything old always seems to become new again in the seasonal style cycles, and the time seems right to revisit this era as people are once again looking to have a little fun and are easing the tight grip on their wallets.

There's a little optimism that comes with the '20s," says Meredith Melling Burke, Vogue's senior market director. "You have the color, the 3-D embellishment. It all feels upbeat, and it all plays into a more carefree attitude.

The exuberance of the time — and especially in the clothes worn for nightlife and dancing — is appealing, but you also run the risk of an over-the-top look that cannot be sustained for a long time, says Harold Koda, curator in charge of The Costume Institute at The Metropolitan Museum of Art. That's what happened after the stock market crash in 1929 when anything flashy suddenly looked so wrong, he explains.

The clothes and attitude of 2012 are a smarter version of what was offered in the flapper days; it's all being done in a more approachable, thoughtful way, Koda

But Koda says he sees a sociological link between then and now when it comes to people testing boundaries. "There was a generational change happening. It was about losing the Edwardian restrictions then, but there was a sense of social opportunity that's in the air now.

He also can draw some parallels in fashion trends. Rich, luxurious textiles were so important — as they are now — and the favorite silhouette was long and languid,

The woman is wearing a sensual expression of textile and technique rather than highlighting the fine points of her body. The look suggests animation ... but it's a straight-up and straight-down line in supple fabrics, satin, georgette or chiffon. It's not an ostentatious sexiness, but you could see it might appeal to women who are being attentive to their fitness. It's an elegant way to show off what you've been doing on the Pilates

Move-in before marriage no longer predicts divorce

ATLANTA (AP) — Nearly half of first marriages break up within 20 years, a new government study finds. With those odds, you might wonder: Would we be better off living together

The new research, part of a marriage survey of 22,000 men and women, suggests times have changed from the days when living together signaled poor chances for a successful marriage later.

"It's not playing as big a role in predicting divorce as it used to, said Casey Copen, lead author of the study.

Living together before marriage has been a long-growing trend. In the late 1960s, only about 10 percent of U.S. couples moved in together first, and they ended up with higher divorce

Today, about 60 percent of couples live together before they first marry.

"It's becoming so common, it's not surprising it no longer negatively affects marital stability, said Wendy Manning, co-director of the National Center for Family & Marriage Research at Bowling Green State University

Researchers with the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention looked for trends in first marriages. They interviewed men and women ages 15 to 44 during the years 2006 to 2010. About 40 percent were married.

The study found those who were engaged and living together before the wedding were about as likely to have marriages that lasted 15 years as couples who hadn't lived together.

But what about the couples who were living together but weren't engaged? The new study found marriage was less likely to survive to the 10- and 15-year mark among couples who weren't engaged when they lived together — findings similar to earlier research.

For example, for women, there was about a 60 percent likelihood a marriage would survive 15 On the Web: CDC report:

years if the couple either hadn't lived together before the wedding or were engaged while they were sharing the same living space.

But if no firm marriage commitment was made while she and her boyfriend were living together, the likelihood the marriage would last 15 years fell to 53 percent. The numbers were similar for men.

Potential explanations include laxer attitudes about commitment, lower education levels or family histories that made these is a trial couples more pessimistic about marriage, Copen said.

Commitment has made a difference. In interviews with some women who have been married 20 years or more after living with their spouse first, firm belief in a future together was a common theme.

"I sort of knew he would be part of my life long-term.... I wasn't thinking, 'He's moving in with me, is he ever going to marry me?" said Hillary Mickell, a San Francisco woman who first moved in with her husband when they were students at Boston University. But this was in 1985, and she did try to hide their situation from her parents in California, sometimes telling them her beau answered the phone because there had been a snowstorm and he was stuck in her apartment. "It became a running joke —

■ The percentage of young women currently living with a male partner grew from 3 percent in 1982 to 11 percent recently.

■ Women and men with bachelor's degrees were more likely to delay marriage but also more likely to eventually get married and stayed married for at least 20

■ Asian women were the most likely to be in a first marriage that lasted at least 20 years. Nearly 70 percent of Asian women were still in their first marriage, compared to 54 percent of white women, 53 percent of Hispanic women and 37 percent of black women. Among men, 62 percent of His-

Home beer brewers seek changes to alcohol laws

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — About the only thing Kevin Flynn enjoys more than drinking his home-brewed beer is sharing it with fellow beer club members at festivals and tasting competitions. So Flynn and his buddies were shocked to discover that Wisconsin law prohibits sharing homemade suds anywhere outside the brewer's home.

The law could "pretty much be the end of competitions in Wisconsin," he lamented. "At least legal ones."

An explosion of interest in home brewing is forcing lawmakers across the country to review long-forgotten alcohol laws, some of which date back to Prohibition. Although the old rules have rarely been enforced, beer enthusiasts fear they could criminalize the rapidly growing hobby and kill scores of annual tasting events that bring tourists to small towns and cities.

In Wisconsin, Flynn and other home brewers may soon be off the hook. The state Legislature last week passed a bill to allow them to transport homemade beer and wine and to share it with other adults. Brewers will still not be permitted to sell anything they make, and they will remain exempt from permit requirements and taxes.

The proposal now heads to Gov. Scott Walker, who plans to sign it into law.

At least 17 states have ambiguous laws on whether home brewers can transport beer or wine outside the home, according to the American Homebrewers Association in Boulder, Colo.

The patchwork of rules can be frustrating for hobbyists who would prefer to spend their time exchanging recipes for pale ale or rhapsodizing about different varieties of hops, barley and

Some states — including Georgia and South Carolina — have restrictions similar to Wisconsin's. In Kansas and Minnesota, home brewers can only make beverages for themselves or family members. Other states permit homemade beer and wine to be consumed by guests, too, as in Arizona, Hawaii, Idaho and Illinois.

A few states have been slow to accommodate the trend. Utah just legalized home brewing in 2009, and Oklahoma followed in 2010. Mississippi and Alabama are the only states that still forbid

Dan Grady of the Wisconsin Homebrewers Alliance, who led the legislative effort to revise Wisconsin's law, said beer-makers need to be watchful in case states try to use the issue to generate money for their tight budgets.

"States are under enormous pressure. It's a revenue issue," he said. "Everything is on the table these days.

Gary Glass, director of the home brewers association, said it's a balancing act when considering whether to pursue a change in the law.

"The question becomes, at what point does a home brewing community want to take on having the law changed if it's not really having an impact to what they're doing?"

Glass, who organizes the group's popular national conference, said he's had trouble securing a venue in states with vague home brewing laws. The conference, which changes its location annually, brings in $500,000 to local

A grassroots reform effort succeeded last year in Oregon, where the law had been similar to Wisconsin's. Glass, who helped draft Wisconsin's bill, said the legislation's demise would have set a bad precedent for home brewing.

"In this economy, you're stifling an industry that's growing," he said. "It sounds like a bad move.

More than ever, people with little or no experience brewing beer or other fermented beverages are investing in kits and ingredients to make their own. The hobby has expanded into a vibrant beer culture, with brewers freely sharing their concoctions among neighbors and friends and in clubs and competitions.

Last year, there were 411 beer competitions sanctioned by the home brewers association and the Beer Judge Certification Program. That's up from fewer than 100 in the early 1990s.

"Back in the day, everybody thought home brewing would just be what your grandfather would do," said Jason Heindel, president of the Beer Barons of Milwaukee Cooperative.

Home brewing has also helped invigorate the booming craft brewing industry. And it's generated a cottage industry of its own. An annual survey of brewing supply shops around the country showed an increase in sales for beginner brewing kits, according to the home brewing association.

Home brewing was illegal in the United States until 1978, when the federal government lifted Prohibition-era restrictions on making alcohol in the home. The revised law allowed homemade beer and wine to be offered at tasting competitions but also left most alcohol regulations up to individual states. So many states have their own home-brewing rules that supersede federal policies.

Alaska, river cruising top 2012 cruise trends

MIAMI (AP) — Alaska is a hot destination again and river voyages are enjoying a boost in popularity this year as the cruise industry works on luring back potential first-time passengers put off by the Costa Concordia tragedy.

The Concordia accident. in which 32 people died when the ship ran aground off the Italian coast in January, has been an overarching story in the cruise world so far this year. The Costa line is owned by Carnival Corp., the largest cruise operator in the world, which was forced to cut its 2012 profit forecasts nearly in half after the accident. It's also churned up an industry-wide wave of

"What's new is the impact of the Costa Concordia tragedy on absolutely every corner of cruising I can think of for the time being," said CruiseCritic.com editor-in-chief Carolyn Spencer Brown. "That's not something we certainly want to write about or cover or hear about — but the trend as a result of that is the emphasis on safety and security."

Cruise industry officials and travel agents say people who have cruised before and understand how safe it is won't be affected as much by Concordia as potential first-time passengers scared away by pictures of the hulking vessel lving on its side in the water. Still, that's likely to slow growth in a year in which the industry was expected to further recover from the recession amid the debut of innovative ships designed to snag first-timers and families.

"There's no magic bullet," said Christine Duffy, president of the Cruise Lines International Association, an industry group that represents 26 major lines. "We have to make sure people have the right information, have access to data on our safety record ... and all the questions that have been raised as a result of the Concordia. That allows for the travel agents and our brands to do the marketing that they do and bring people on board their Here are some details on what's new in bookings, launchings and other cruise trends for the coming vear:

BOOKING TRENDS: Even with the loss of potential first-time cruisers, around 17.2 million passengers are expected to take a cruise this year — up 5 percent from 2011, according to the Cruise Lines International Association. International business is up: Two years ago about a third of the passengers came from North America, now it's about 68 percent. There is definite room for growth, as the trade industry's surveys show that about only about 3 percent of people in the United States have ever been on a cruise. That's why getting first-timers on board is so important. The Caribbean is again expected to be the leading destination.

CRUISING: RIVÉR River cruises in Europe and the United States are expected to gain passengers in 2012. Avalon Waterways is adding three new ships (carrying 166, 128 and 32 passengers) for European river cruises, and closer to home two ships will traverse the mighty Mississippi. The 436-passenger American Queen, the largest steamboat in the world, was bought by the Great American Steamboat Co. and got a $6 million retrofitting. It will be relaunched next month, featuring a new interior and two top-deck dining venues. In August comes the launching of the brand new 150-passenger Queen the Mississippi by American Cruise Lines. Spencer Brown said it's the first new build for Big Muddy cruises in 15 years.

"It's been moving this way, but all of sudden, river cruising is hotter than hot," she said. "And people like it because they feel like 'we're still on a ship but we're within sight of land and it's easy to get on and off.' And they're smaller. Europe and the Midwest are really hot right now."

ALASKA: The 49th state is expected to be bigger than ever as cruise destination this year. The state "head tax" for cruise passengers led some lines to reduce their Alaska itineraries in recent years, but since it was rolled back in 2010 the ships have returned. Plus, higher airfares to Europe this year have more people looking at an Alaska cruise as an alternative vacation. The Disney Wonder sailing to Alaska from Seattle this year helps put it on the radar for more families.

Hot color for homes? Tangerine Tango

Bold, dramatic and invigorating, Tangerine Tango is dancing its way into home decor trends in 2012 with a punch of reddish-orange panache.

The hue is a vivacious alternative to last year's cheery honeysuckle, and design experts say it's easy to incorporate into any home. Pillows, bedspreads and tabletop accessories in this high-impact color can add spice to any room.

Or add tangerine appliances and personal electronics for an unexpected pop of color, says Leatrice Eiseman, executive director of the Pantone Institute, the research arm of the Carlstadt, N.J.-based Pantone Inc., which sets color standards for the home and fashion industries.

"It's the perfect color to move us out of the dull and dreary winter months and into spring," says Sabrina Soto, host of HĞTV's "The High Low Project.

■ Paint/Wallpaper

One easy and inexpensive way to brighten up your home and stay on top of the trends is to paint an accent wall in this hot hue.

A bit gun-shy of a tangerine living

Secondary rooms, such as powder rooms and entryways, are perfect places to experiment with bold colors, Soto says.

"Surprise your guests with walls that pop," she says.

Wallpaper by Pennsylvania-based York Wallcoverings dives head-first into the tangerine trend with a variety of luminescent, metallic gold patterns set against spicy orange backgrounds.

New Jersey-based Thibaut Design offers wallpaper in ornate, intricate, Jacobean paisleys and fanciful plumed birds in this year's color, as well as less dramatic florals set against a cream background.

■ Furniture

A lacquered side table or club chair and ottoman are small yet powerful ways to pop this color into a room through furniture.

Designer Suzanne Kasler, who partners with Ballard, used a heavy tangerine linen from the Europeaninspired home furnishings retailer to upholster a pair of tufted slipper chairs that are pictured with nautical accents including a seashelllined mirror, rattan baskets and large glass lanterns.

Tampa hosts convention for sexy pin-up culture

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) -Kelly Ackley, a 30-something mom of three, is wearing a black bustier, pink taffeta tutu and pink, kitten-heel boots. She's straddling a small rocking horse and with a saucy glance over her right shoulder, giggles as her is photo is snapped. Jerry Lee Lewis' Shakin' Goin' On.' squawks softly in the background.

Ackley sounds out some vowels, as she was instructed by the photographer: "Aaaa, eee, iiii, oooo, uuuuu," she says, exaggerating her mouth so her facial expressions alternatively seductive and coyly surprised.

"Cute!" says the photog-rapher, 66-year-old Richard Strawn.

"It helps to make a sound when you pose," said Ackley, smiling demurely with Ferrari red lips. Welcome to the sexy America, with his business partner, then the "Pin-Up America" April Catalano.

"In the world of pin-ups there's no stereotypes,' Catalano said.

Strawn and Catalano are organizing the first-ever American Pinup Burlesque Fest in Tampa's historic Ybor City neighborhood to run March 23-25. A pin-up pageant, hot rod demonstration, rockabilly bands and workshops on hair and makeup are in the lineup, which will be held in a restored, 1920s theater called The Cuban Club. There will also be a burlesque show.

Two other pin-up conventions, unrelated to this one, take place later this year, both called "Glamourcon," one in Chicago and the other in Long Beach, Calif.

Examples of the retro sexy style found in the pinup world are easy to find in pop culture. Think singer Katy Perry's look when she performed her duet with Sesame Street"'s Elmo (later pulled from the show), Lana Del Rey's jetblack eyeliner and Prada's 2012 Spring/Summer collection. And burlesque star Dita von Teese has created a line of affordable, pin-upinspired lingerie for Target in Australia. (No word on whether the lacy back-andred underthings will be available in the U.S.)

Even with all the implied sexiness, there's a sweetness and girl-next-door look to pin-up style — especially when you compare it to the in-your-face raunch of some of today's starlets. "Back in the '40s and '50s it was sometimes associated with being a little risqué, but there was a fine line between naughty and innocent," Catalano said Sometimes people think that if the word 'pin-up' is used, then it means that it's porn. I have to help break that mold, whether it's through the magazine or photo shoots.

Very little of what Cata lano and Strawn do could be considered racy by the standards of the 21st century. There's a lot of cleavage, but in the magazine, no nudity.

Baptist minister teaches through blues music

BY DENNIS O'NEIL

NEW ERA FEATURE WRITER

Living in Indianapolis in 1992, the Rev. Charlie Edmonds was down on his luck.

His godmother, who he moved from Hopkinsville to care for, had just died. He had just been laid off from his job as a parking attendant. He aggravated an old injury he suffered in Vietnam and was walking on crutches.

He still had the blues, though.

Edmonds had started his own music company, Blue Rhapsody Publishing Company, the same year and was playing gigs around Indianapolis. He always played solo, picking out blues numbers from an acoustic guitar on his knee. One evening, he was playing a local supper club and took a break in the middle of the set. An audience member greeted him as he walked off stage

"He said, 'What you're doing is like a lost art form, the solo acoustic artist," Edmonds recalled. "I thought about that and I said, 'I'm going to add an educational aspect to Edmonds decided to develop an educational program focusing on the history of the blues. Growing up the son of two musicians in Todd County, he had already been playing blues music most of his life. He started visiting the library and researching the music's history. Edmonds hoped to present his seminar in the local schools the coming fall.

From there, Edmonds career blossomed. He started presenting his program, "The Birth of the Blues," nationally and internationally. He also started performing more often around the country, playing restaurants, resorts and blues festivals. He's also recorded several CDs worth of blues numbers. Reflecting on his humble start in Indianapolis, Edmonds speaks with pride.

"I had $140 a week cash flow from my unemployment check," he said. "I had a $12 guitar I bought at a sidewalk sale, and I took off like that.'

Throughout his career, though, Edmonds, known as "The Preaching Bluesman," has balanced his musical life with ministerial work. He has been a pastor since he was 21, working for Baptist Rev. Charlie Edmonds churches in Hazard and Park City, where he lives now. He's worked as a prison chaplain and with rehabilitation programs for ex-convicts.

Edmonds also does missionary work through his company Greater Works Christian Outreach Ministry. He also runs a musical therapy program, working with Alzheimer's and dementia patients.

"True blues you or you don't."

Edmonds feels his ministerial work and musical work constantly inform one another.

'Out of my work in the secular world, all those things I had done are incorporated into my outreach ministry," he said. "My faith is the most important possession I have. Everything I do, I do by faith."

Edmonds' educational program looks at the development of blues music among slaves and tracks its progress into the post-WWII era. Edmonds emphasizes the versatility of the blues and the ways blacks used it to cope with cultural oppression.

Edmonds also tracks how blues influenced popular American musical forms like swing and rock and roll. He tries to express the broader impact the music had on American life.

"I'm trying to bring out all the viable ways the music contributed to the lives of the people," he said. "These illiterate people with no rights made such a viable contribution to this nation."

Edmonds hopes to offer his program in schools in Christian and Todd Counties. He recently started booking more dates around the country and abroad. Even if he doesn't have a gig, he will often grab his guitar and play for a few hours on a street corner, taking requests from pedestrians who walk past.

While he admires blues musicians like B.B. King and Stevie Ray Vaughn, Edmonds has never tried to mimic their sounds. True blues, he said, comes from within a person, springing out of their life experience.

Born prior to the civil rights movement, Edmonds remembers segregation vividly; the separate bathrooms, the separate water fountains, entering a white person's home through the back door. This experience, he said, gives him a deeper understanding of the music.

"There are guys that aspire to and are very good at playing every note like Stevie Ray Vaughn," he said. 'True blues you can't mimic. You either got it or you

Whatever the reason for the changes in your aunt, God doesn't hold her accountable for her present actions, any more than He would hold a small child responsible for acting like a child. A diocese spokesman said the church was selected for closure because of deep debt and declining membership. The parish needs $1.5 million in repairs.

The Rev. John Oliveira, pastor of both parishes, said the news was received at last weekend's Masses with great sadness. No date for a closure has been set.

We do what we do today because we did it yesterday--going to work to support the family, taking care of the kids, giving an offering at church. How can we renew or make new a love that has become mere habit

Instead of obeying a list of rules, we follow a Rather, maybe we should seek to rediscover the attitude of love in the everyday habits of our lives. We simply take the things that have become mere habit and inject love into them again. For example, try saying to yourself as you do that routine task, "I'm doing this because I love him;" "I am acting with love as I do this for her." Try it, you may like, and it may make a loving difference in your relationships.

only way to make something new is to start

Why is this so important? Because much of life is routine, And if we don't allow love to permeate and fill the routine of life, love will be missing from the majority of the minutes of our day. This would be disobeying the Lord's command.

set up the laptop next to his bed. Together we watched a film that transported us all to a world far from our troubles.

During the next weeks, Tom helped me get Gene in and out of the car as we went to medical appointments. He listened not just to Gene's pain, but to my sorrow as well. When I needed to go out of town overnight, Tom volunteered to stay with Gene. At last, after Gene spent more than a week in the hospital, the orthopedist discovered that Gene had a staph infection hidden deep inside his spine. No amount of painkillers or physical therapy would ever have cured the infection. For six more weeks, Gene traveled daily to the hospital for infusions of high-powered antibiotics. I drove him there and back during the first weeks, but by the end of the time. Gene was well enough to drive himself. After six long months, the dark curtain over our lives slowly lifted. Today, Gene is able to do everything he wants ... except shovel snow.

And Tom? He performed no delicate surgery. He offered no miracle drug. But the hope and encouragement he infused into my caregiver's heart were better medicine than any prescription written by a doctor. All I had to do was call.
